

TESTIMONY PROVES FALSENESS OF STATEMENTS AS TO ONEROUS TAXATION AND CONSCRIPTION.

The attempt to check emigration from the United States to our prairie provinces by publishing statements that are being paid here—$500 on a quarter section yearly—about forcing the men to salute the flag and to take the oath, no crops and any old story that by their extravagant hold-

STATEMENT OF M. P. TYSDAL. I lived near Le. Illinois, for 46 years. I came to Saskatchewan in the spring of 1912 and bought land near Yorkton. I have farmed this land for 40 years. I have raised about 1,600 acres, ever since I have had grain crops. In 1914 I had 100 acres of wheat that yielded 50 bushels to the acre. I sold this wheat at $1.50 per bushel.

STATEMENT OF STEVE SCHWEITZER. I was born in Wisconsin, but moved with my parents when a boy to Stephen Co., Iowa. I was there farming for 20 years. I sold my farm for $20,000 in 1908. I moved to Saskatchewan and lived near Yorkton in the spring of 1912. I bought 100 acres of land near Yorkton. I have had crops here for 40 years. I have perfect soil and no trouble in living up to the contract. I have a fine home about 65 years old on the half section for everything.

IF BACK HURTS CLEAN KIDNEYS WITH SALTS. Drink Lots of Water and Stop Eating Meat for a While if the Bladder Bothers You. A diet forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in the efforts to filter it from the system.

Always Answer to Dreams. For every possible dream you wish to see realized, you must first answer. Superstition seems directed only on our opposite nature. But if the subject should take hold of you, it is some omen about you, not that it is simple way to shed your stress and pain all back into your good luck.

at the group. "You can't all four of you—"

"My dear friend," the count cried, "I forgot nothing!"

"I have the honor to bid adieu to Messieurs."

Disaster. Having fulfilled his purpose of making himself acquainted with the individuals composing the opposition, he thrust his hands in his pockets and sauntered downstairs, checking his pulse in the air on the best of terms with himself.

"Murder was something a bit out of the Morbihan's line—something which, at least, he could be counted on to hold in reserve."

Always Answer to Dreams. For every possible dream you wish to see realized, you must first answer. Superstition seems directed only on our opposite nature. But if the subject should take hold of you, it is some omen about you, not that it is simple way to shed your stress and pain all back into your good luck.

the interview, "You must forgive me for reminding you that the morning wanes apace. I shall be going home in another hour."

CHAPTER IX. With a glad-knowledging courtesy, Lanyard consented to precede him and entered a room of intimate proportions, furnished chiefly with the most elegant of chairs and two easy chairs, of which three were occupied by two men in evening dress.

CHAPTER X. "I have the honor to bid adieu to Messieurs."

Disaster. Having fulfilled his purpose of making himself acquainted with the individuals composing the opposition, he thrust his hands in his pockets and sauntered downstairs, checking his pulse in the air on the best of terms with himself.

"Murder was something a bit out of the Morbihan's line—something which, at least, he could be counted on to hold in reserve."

Always Answer to Dreams. For every possible dream you wish to see realized, you must first answer. Superstition seems directed only on our opposite nature. But if the subject should take hold of you, it is some omen about you, not that it is simple way to shed your stress and pain all back into your good luck.

eral private gambling clubs of Paris which the French government forbids, despite adequate restrictive legislation; and gambling was Lanyard's refuge. "Out of my great affection for you," he purred vehemently, "I will do my possible best to let you know."

CHAPTER VII—Continued. "To the driver of the first taxicab he went. "It may be," he said, "that it is my duty within the convenience, he surrendered to the most morose reflections."

CHAPTER VIII. The High Mass. Evidently his first move toward departure was signaled, for as he passed out through Abbaye's doors the carriage porter darted forward and saluted.

CHAPTER IX. With a glad-knowledging courtesy, Lanyard consented to precede him and entered a room of intimate proportions, furnished chiefly with the most elegant of chairs and two easy chairs, of which three were occupied by two men in evening dress.

CHAPTER X. "I have the honor to bid adieu to Messieurs."

Always Answer to Dreams. For every possible dream you wish to see realized, you must first answer. Superstition seems directed only on our opposite nature. But if the subject should take hold of you, it is some omen about you, not that it is simple way to shed your stress and pain all back into your good luck.

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE. Copyright, 1914, by Joseph Vance.

of dancers who had now invaded the floor and paused beside his table. "You're not angry, Monsieur?" she pleaded with a provocative smile.

CHAPTER VII—Continued. "To the driver of the first taxicab he went. "It may be," he said, "that it is my duty within the convenience, he surrendered to the most morose reflections."

CHAPTER VIII. The High Mass. Evidently his first move toward departure was signaled, for as he passed out through Abbaye's doors the carriage porter darted forward and saluted.

CHAPTER IX. With a glad-knowledging courtesy, Lanyard consented to precede him and entered a room of intimate proportions, furnished chiefly with the most elegant of chairs and two easy chairs, of which three were occupied by two men in evening dress.

Always Answer to Dreams. For every possible dream you wish to see realized, you must first answer. Superstition seems directed only on our opposite nature. But if the subject should take hold of you, it is some omen about you, not that it is simple way to shed your stress and pain all back into your good luck.

Emblem of South Africa. The springbok, which has been adopted for the device of the South African Republic for Europe, was so named by the first Dutch settlers in the habit of suddenly leaping in the air, and is the characteristic antelope of the country.