

Thanksgiving with the old folks at home—it does satisfy! For your smoking, Chesterfields do the same thing—they satisfy!

But Chesterfields are MILD, too-that's the wonder of it.

Don't expect this new cigarette enjoyment (satisfy, yet mild) from any cigarette but Chesterfields, be cause no cigarette maker can copy the Chasterfield blend—an entirely new combination of tobaccos and the biggest discovery in cigarette making in 20 years.

Legend of the Phoenix.

The story of the phoenix is a common superstition in several countries. According to the ancient and best accepted legend, the world has but one phoenix. This animal, at the end of 1599 years, burns itself to death in a funeral pyre of its own erection and also soon as it expires another phoenix with wings outstretched rises from the flames.

Blunt Insingution.
A fashionable painter, noted for his provaie output, was discussing at a studio tea in New York a recent scandal fin the picture traite. "Look here, old man," said a noted etcher, "do you point, all your own pictures?" "I do," the other answered hosty, "and with my own hands, its." "And what do you puy your hands?" the etcher inquired. "I'm thinking of starting an ert factory myself."

Joy and sorrow, expectation and dispointment, happy wedding feativities and fineral occasions are mingled in a strange way in this present world, and sometimes follow each other in rapid succession. This is particularly true of the one who is so deeply morned to day.

Very rarely, indeed, if ever before, has it been our lot, in so brief a time, and funeral of any person, as in the official state the haptism, wedding, and funeral of any person, as in the companion of the compani

And, today, the same bridal party of young people, who so happily participated in the wedding, is called upon to render services in the last rites of this sociation. Why a life that gave promise of so much usefulness, and why a home in which a young husband and wife were so happily match, and to happily match, and to bright, should be thus, so saidly despoiled, is one of the inscrutable mysteries of Providence. It may be that God had need of her for a larger work in the heavenly life beyond, but of this we are certain, that our heaven by Father does not afflict any of his children, willingly, and sometime, we will understand. Sometime, when all till life's lessons have been learned.
