SQUIRREL STORY

J. Allen Bigelow Tells His Grand-children Mortimer A. and I. H. Neff a Story of Mis Hunting Trip.

My dear Boys: In 1870 the sqirrels were very plenty all around Birmingham. Your Grams sisters Annie and Maggie Hubble came down to visit and have a good time as they said, and were going to stay a acout sunrise found me in Stanley's woods.

In half an hour I had four nice squirrels to carry home, and was thinking of going, when Johnnie Alger and Frank — came squirrel huting. There were two up one tree, I had watched and waited, had shaken the bushes, and every time a bush was shaken, the squirrels would scamer about a little, then would be hidden again before I could get my gun.

As Johnnie and Frank asked about squirrels I told them about the two up such a tree. While I was shaking a small tree which grew by the side of a great large log. I found that there was a dandy Yellow Jackets nest right where I was standing on the log.

After looking and watchine a little, and I premised, that if I shot the squirrel, they should have it.

Frank cliend on the log, shook the small tree, when Johnnie said that would sure tract them out, and I premised, that if I shot the squirrel, they should have it.

Frank gave the little tree another good shake, but by this time he had scrapeh is feet ar und on the log and the yellow jackets came evarring out and bagan their business of protecting the more in the substance of the small tree, when Johnnie soft that wood sure start them out, and I premised, that if I shot the squirrel, they should have it.

Frank cliend on the log, shook the small tree, when Johnnie yells our, "shake again Frank, I saw them," see Frank gave the little tree another good abake, but by this time he had scrapeh is feet ar und on the log and the yellow jackets came evarring out and bagan their business of protecting the foundable of the small tree, when so the substance of the substanc began their business of pretecting their home.

Frank was not quite soon enough, those jackets poured out their house and Frank was literally covered with them. Hesitating an instant, he comprehended the situation and started on the run, he came direct one, grabbed me around the neck with both arms, yelling out take 'em off, take 'em of So you see the stinger was stung.
Your loving grand daddy,
J. ALLEN BIGELOW.
