Food for Thought.
"You say you want to marry my daughter. Have you spoken to her?" "Yes, sir," replied the young man, "and have gained her consent." "Well, if she has said 'Yes,' that settles it. Anything I might say or do would have the slightest influence." Then the young man went home and wondered if he were too young to marry such a girl.

Eggs as Large as Peas.
I was waiting in a jeweler's shop (writes a correspondent) for a repaired watch, when another customer said to the jeweler: "Do you sell old gems—loose diamonds, pearls, and so on?" "Oh, yes," was the reply. "Well, then," said the customer, "show me a new-laid egg, for I can't get them at the grocer's."—Manchester Guardian.

Love Must Find Another Way.
Hurry into the son-in-law's office, a young man who gave his name as Jim Brown, said to the clerk: "Send me a marriage certificate, will you?" "What's the idea?" quizzed the clerk. "Well, you see, it's this way: The girl I want to marry is under age, and I'd have to get her parents' consent—they won't give it, so I've got to have a certificate before I can carry out my plan." "What's your plan?" "Well, if you won't tell anybody, I'll let you in on it. If I carry a marriage certificate it will fool the girl's father and mother, they'll relent, like all fathers and mothers do when they think the marriage has been performed. They will give their consent, then we can really get married." "Nothing doing," said the clerk. "Sorry, but—"

Brown departed, sadly.—Atlanta Constitution.

WILLIAM S. CULBERTSON

William S. Culbertson, member of the new tariff commission, is from Emporia, Kan. He was born in Pennsylvania in 1864, was reared in Kansas and has spent the past six years in Washington as a practicing lawyer and economic expert. He was with the former tariff board, writing the first volume of its report on the wool schedule. In 1912 he acted as tariff expert for the senate finance committee in its work on the Underwood-Simmons tariff act. He is now counsel for the federal trade commission and has studied tariffs throughout South America for that body. He is a Republican.

Fared Badly in Peaceful Times.
George Saviarin, who was brought before Magistrate Goodman the other day as a vagrant, said that he always had a hard time getting a job unless there was a fight going on, and then, though he found employment his luck wasn't the best. He was shot through the chest in the Boxer trouble in China, he said; got a bullet through one arm in the Russo-Japanese war, and his right leg was shot off in France in 1914. Peaceful times in the United States had driven him to the verge of suicide, he declared.—New York Tribune.

New Oil Can for Machinery.
A new oil can for use around machinery has just appeared on the market which has a metal bellows as oil container which is held extended by a small spring. Pressure upon the bottom of the can forces the bellows together and the bottom of the can upward, with the result that a strong and steady stream of oil can be injected where desirable.

Try the Barber Shop.
"Alice," said the stolid-looking individual, upon entering the public library, "I am looking for something on bald heads." "Well, I don't believe you will find anything in here," responded the attendant, "the gentlemen always remove their hats when they come in."

Well Worked.
"Was the plumber's work at your house well done, madam?" "The work wasn't well done, but it was."

WHITEHEAD AND STANDART

In Paris Capital.

In connection with the name of Lima two characters will always be indissolubly associated with its history—Hizarro, the intrepid conqueror, whose remnant rest in the cathedral whose cornerstone he laid, who founded the capital and gave it the name of La Ciudad de los Reyes (The City of the Kings), and second a young girl who renounced a life of social ease and pleasure and became renowned for her piety, a renown which resulted in her canonization by Pope Clement IX, in 1621, under the name of Saint Rosa of Lima, the patron saint of the capital city as well as of all Catholic South America.
