The enthusiastic beginning of the large community chorus in our midst, has been very encouraging to those interested in this big musical movement.

Eighty people were present at the first rehearsal, and after the first rehearsal, finds that the four parts are well balanced so far. This chorus furnishes a wonderful opportunity for all who are interested in chorus singing.

It is open to all who enjoy singing in chorus. If you are interested come to the rehearsals held every Thursday evening in the auditorium of the Royal Oak High School, and enroll in the chorus. The very nominal fee of $1 is to cover the cost of the music and to include a copy of "The Messiah" and all other music to be used during the year.

For several weeks we have been wondering just what all our old and faithful pocket book. It didn't look natural or seemed very queer. It had a waxy, lank, empty and a void appearance or look. It looked as if it was a vacant affair. It seemed vacuous, destitute, unfilled, unoccupied, unfurnished, unsubstantial, unsatisfying, hollow, flat and deserted. It looked to a man up a tree as if it was "busted," and it was. The thought that perhaps the Eccentric might help our subscribers who were a little behind only knew of the sad predicament we were in. It occurred to us that it had been sent about five years since we had sent out any bills for subscriptions and if we did now our friends if nudged a little might respond in time to save the day. So, for the past two weeks we have been sending out bills. We were pleased to see that we had many who were back from one to five years, and the response to the "ticklers" has been very prompt, pleasing, and amiable as well as satisfying, and the wrinkles of the old wallet have been pushed out to the fullest thereof. With only two exceptions have our bills been met with what one could call a "withering reception."

Both of these people are supposed to be human and have hearts. No. 2, says, "Glad to get your bill. Here's two dollars. Your paper is a. k. Glad to read it." Many others give encouragement in about the same good old way.
