Lizard Squirts Blood From Eyes.

We have about fourteen species of horned lizards in this country, and most people still call them "horned lizards." Some of their habits are extremely remarkable, but some more so than their ability to send it out a fine jet of blood from either eye. This fact is very rarely touched upon in literature, and the average reader of the life histories of our animals has never heard of this remarkable habit, says a writer in Popular Science Monthly, in a article entitled, "A Lizard That Squirts Jets of Blood From Its Eyes." Blood-squirting is essentially indulged in when the lizard is laboring under certain states of excitement. The attack comes on suddenly, at a time when you have the lizard in your grasp. It will suddenly stiffen its neck and throw the head upward, as the eyes begin to glow, and in another second you can plainly hear a peculiar hissing sound, followed immediately by the finest imaginable jet of pure blood from one or the other of its eyes. With such force is this squirting that the blood stream, lasting a couple of seconds, may be thrown to a distance of fully five feet.
