What Inaigina Was This?
Members of the Red Cross auxiliaries may be able to explain what is to follow, but it is too much for me. Those who knit, crochet, tat, cross-stitch and otherwise manipulate the elusive needle may be able to tell what it all meant, but all I do is to relate the facts.

"Was a large colored woman, walking down the street. Around her ample form she wore an apron of black and white checkered material. On it, done in what I was told was cross-stitch, were three large roosters. Perhaps the design was taken from some nursery pattern.

And as if to make sure that there was no mistake, in letters four inches high above the birds was the following legend, also done in cross-stitch: "Roosters."—Washington Star.

NEWS REVIEW OF THE GREAT WAR

Allies Continue Their Advance in Picardy Steadily but More Slowly.

ROYE AND NOYON IN DANGER

First American Field Army Is Formed—Situation in Austria and Russia Improved—Man-O-war Bill Introduced in the Senate.

Geneva dispatches said the Austro-Swiss frontier was closed for some days and all trains were full of Austro troops going to the Italian front, which was taken to mean another coming offensive there. However, the Italians were ready for it and daily improve their positions, especially in the mountains.

In Albania the Austrians evacuated points held by their south of the Sencet river.

An amazing development is the seizure of Baku, center of the Caspian sea oil district, by a British force which made its way up through Mesopotamia and Persia.

The serious condition of the central powers resulted in a "kaiser conference" at German midland headquarters, which was attended by the rulers of Germany and Austria and their chief advisers and representatives of the Turks, Bulgarians and Russian satellites. The internal situation in Austria-Hungary especially is growing more serious rather than better, and an explosion there almost any day would not greatly surprise anyone. Bulgaria shows signs of breaking away from the central powers, and the Turkish general public knows nothing of what is going on there or what is expected.

The situation in Russia, including Siberia, also is improving, for the forces opposed to the bolsheviks and the Germans are growing stronger and annihilating a eastern front has seriously worry the Huns is being considered, especially since the "supreme government of the northern territory," embracing half a dozen districts, has declared itself opposed to the Germans and ready to fight them. Possession of the port of Archangel and the Murmansk coast by the allies has long been troops to help this movement. That Germany recognizes the menace is evident from the fact that she is sending 50,000 soldiers from the west to Siberia, and has ordered Finland to prepare to make war on the people of Matankov and the allies there. Dispatches from Helsinki declared the Germans intend to occupy Petrograd, though what they would gain by possession of that hunger-stricken city is not apparent. Louisa and Trotsky and their soviet government were reported to have fled from Moscow to the great fortress near Petrograd, and to have plans of a triumvirate composed of Louisa, Trotsky and Zinovieff. Louisa also issued a manifesto urging the pitiless annihilation of all counter-revolutionaries.

Moscow being admittedly in the control of the counter-revolutionaries, the German embassy also fled from the city to Pskov, which greatly perturbed the German press.

The diplomats of all the allied powers, now living on warships at Archangel, have demanded of Trotsky an explanation of his threat that Russia would declare war "against Anglo-French imperialism."

The first American regiment sent to Siberia, the Twenty-seventh regiment infantry from Manila, landed at Vladivostok Thursday, and other Yankees are on the way.

The Czechs-Slovaks in eastern Siberia now have the assistance of British and French forces which landed at Vladivostok and joined them in the fight against the Bolsheviks. The Czechs were last reported as engaged in a desperate battle with a large bolshevik army.

A long step forward in the recent support of these fighting Czechs and of their fellow nationals who are in rebellion against Austria-Hungary was the formal recognition by Great Britain of the Czechs-Slovaks as an allied nation and of their armies as an allied force, regularly waging warfare against the central powers. It was hoped and believed America and other allied nations will follow the example of Great Britain.

Last week's dispatches told of furious and bloody riots against the Germans in several Russian cities, caused by the attempts of the Huns to seize foodstuffs.

The activities of German U-boats off the coast have grown so serious that the cabinet is said to be holding a long meeting to discussing the top" with the battalion. He has been acclaimed the most popular man in the battalion and recommended for a commission as captain by the regimental commander.

"Little" Major Atkins, who is known to the men of the battalion as "the little major" to distinguish him from the real major of the regiment, is said to carry the good will of the unit with him. He is firmly believed that when he is with them in an engagement their casualties are light. On one occasion, when

SURELY MUST HAVE NERVE

British "Chasing Pilots" Are Required to Do All Sorts of Stunts in the Air.

The orders that the "chasing pilots" attached to the aviation corps of the British front have to undergo before they are considered as proficient in their perilous work are sufficiently trying to test the nerve of the bravest flyer. As an army corps, the pilots of the Philadelphia "Chasing" pilots, the candidate who passes the required course of aerial gymnastics must either be a man of nerve or possessed of no nerve at all.

At this school, he says, you will see in a few weeks thousands of feet begin to flap vertically as if the pilot intended to loop the loop. Suddenly it ceases, and continues for perhaps a full minute poised perpendicularly on its tail. Then, with the engine switched off, it falls helplessly, full first, spinning in the air, until it is found again that resembles the helpless flutter of a falling leaf. Then suddenly the engine roars again, the twisting, fluttering dead bird begins to move, and the life rights itself indignantly on its pinions, swoops down in swift and bounding course, mounts the wind and bears up and up, as fast and graceful as any bird.

Other thrillingly thrilling things they do, the soaring, steep descents, the air-flecks that seem to consist of miraculous to the earth-bound ones who stand gazing upward in awe—Yeats's Companion.

NOT TOO GOOD FOR 'ENERY'

Something of a Novelty in the Way of Funerals, but It Satisfied "The Wide."

"Ow are yer terday, Mrs. Jones?" said Mrs. Mugins from the corner house. "I'm very sorry to ear of the death of yer 'usband."

"Yes, dead and buried, 'e is, too," said the widow, drying her eyes with the corner of her apron. "Eh! bless 'im, I gver 'im a good funeral; 'e 'ad sixty followers."

"Ow did yer manage to feed all 'em?" gasped Mrs. Mugins.

"Well, ter tell yer the 'onest truth, Mrs. Mugins, I couldn't get food no 'ow, an' I didn't like to seem mean, 'cos 'Enry, bless 'im, was well insured. When we come back from the cemetery I ups an' tells 'em to come for their tea, and then come back 'ere. So to show 'em 'e wasn't meanin' no harm, I took 'em all to the 'Ippodrome and paid for 'em. Poor 'Enry, it was a grand funeral, but none too good for 'im, bless 'im!"—London Tit-Bits.

"LITTLE MAJOR" IS POPULAR

Salvation Army Worker at the Front Has Earned the Good Will of All the "Boys."

John T. Atkins, who is a Salvation Army worker in Chicago, but is now serving with the forces of the United States Army as a Salvation Army worker, has been mentioned in a dispatch from the front and has been several times "over the top" with the battalion. He has been acclaimed the most popular man in the battalion and recommended for a commission as captain by the regimental commander.

"Little" Major Atkins, who is known to the men of the battalion as "the little major" to distinguish him from the real major of the regiment, is said to carry the good will of the unit with him. JUDGE DECIDES STOMACH REMEDY A GREAT SUCCESS

Commissioner of Medication and Consultation Board T. EATON, of the Stomach Remedy, and Endorses It.

Justice William T. Chamberlain, who has been a member of the Board of Medication and Consultation of the U. S. Department of Health, has issued an opinion in which he has pronounced the Stomach Remedy a "great success" in the treatment of indigestion, flatulence, and other ailments of the stomach.

TOO WEAK TO FIGHT

The "Cure-back" man was really never down and out. His weakened condition because of overwork, lack of exercise, improper eating and drinking habits, and lack of sleep, was the result of a long and hard day's work. He was too weak to fight, and his health was suffering. He needed a remedy that would restore his strength and vitality. The Stomach Remedy was the answer. It is a powerful and effective remedy for all ailments of the stomach, and it is the only remedy that has been endorsed by the Commissioner of Medication and Consultation of the U. S. Department of Health.
