WAR GARDEN CONTEST.

On Saturday, September 21, will be held in the main corridor of the court house at Pontiac, a real garden contest. Flowers will also be exhibited by those who will bring them in. This garden contest or corridor fair as it might be named, will last but one day, closing about ten o'clock Saturday night.

There are many war gardens in the city and county as well. It is open to all who will bring in samples of the product of their garden. A splendid list of premiums is being made up by these public spirited people of this city who always get back of any good thing.

This contest is under the direct supervision of the Round Table Club of Pontiac. All who wish to compete for the prizes are required to place their exhibits either Friday evening or Saturday morning early.

The climax of the whole affair will be reached when at 8 p. m. Mr. D. R. Wilson will auctioneer all exhibits for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Come! Bring your garden samples! Help the show! Boost the Red Cross and show the people of this section what you have done to help on the food questions this dry summer.

Col. Mortimer O. Bigelow Has Perfected Transformation Machine that Is Being Copied.

From the Topeka (Kan.) Daily Capital

The following very interesting to all Birmingham people refers to the son of J. Allen Bigelow of West Maple street. Mort, now takes a boy right from the country or plow or from anywhere and makes a soldier of him in two hours.

The making of John Doe, private citizen of Podunk Junction or one of the big league cities, into Private John Doe of the national army at Camp Funston in the short space of two hours is one of the unrecorded chapters of Uncle Sam's gigantic task of licking the Hun. Because it is one of the big things being done here at home and is not reported under the magic headlines, "With the American Army in France," few words descriptive of the metamorphosis of the draftee man into the soldier have found their way into print.

Official records have taken cognizance of the system in vogue at Camp Funston. The plan adopted here of dropping the private citizen into the crucible and extracting him two hours later, a khaki-clad unit of the national army has been adopted in other camps.

John Doe arrives with a trainload of the boys from back home, jaded from the train ride, fearful of the new things before him, remembering the tearful good-byes of mother and sweetheart, but still flaunting defiantly the banner the draft board gave him—"Berlin or Bust." Two hours later he finds himself sitting on a bunk in a wooden barracks, civilian clothes and home behind him, and the big adventure ahead. A kit bag contains all his worldly possessions, given him by Uncle Sam and he is a neatly ticketed and recorded member of the fighting line.

Had John Doe been one of the selective draft men who arrived at Camp Funston last fall, his lot would not have been such a happy one. He would not have spent two hours in the chutes and come out a soldier. Instead of receiving letters written home from Funston last year told how he stood in line for hours, waiting for certain records to be executed and checked, that he was given a cold bath, which gave him a cold in the head; that he was quartered in a cold building and slept tied in a knot at night because he hadn't blankets enough.

The old system is gone and no one mourns it. The new system is here and has worked for months like a charm. There are many departments in the process, aand each department is complete in itself, but there is no interference, every wheel locks into the other, and a smooth running machine is the result.

The big machine works at high speed—1,500 men in a ten-hour day, or two and a half men a minute, are finished by it, and without strain.

Several months ago, when the spring and summer drafts were called to service, Col. M. C. Bigelow took command of the 164th depot brigade at Camp Funston. He selected the best available men to help with the job, and his choice fell on Maj. Frank C. Reilly, infantry, national army, who had held a commission in the regular army non-commissioned office in the army, having been in the Spanish-American war. As assistants he chose Capt. Thomas R. Elkins and Capt. Byron Smith.

Efficiency experts from all over the country have inspected the Funston system worked out by Colonel Bigelow and Major Reilly and have declared it perfect in every particular. Many of the cantonments have adopted it and it is said there is completed a move to have it universally adopted in American camps.

Wooden barracks buildings are used as the receiving station. Seven are as temporary quarters to house the new men for a few hours pending examination and their trip thru the chutes. Two standard barracks buildings and their attached latrines provide all the space required for the entire process.

Upon arrival of the trains bringing the selects they are stopped at a crossing near the receiving station, A detail of sergeants are on hand.

"Fall out," is the first army order the men hear, and as it fits in well with their civilian experience, they fall out of the train and line up. The recruits are then assembled by companies into draft board lots, or county lots, according to whether they are from cities or country communities. Each man carries his baggage and all are made to stand in line. They are then marched to barracks, where they are served hot coffee and sandwiches. Next he finds himself before the register desk. On the register is a column for his name, the number of the papers accompanying him and the information they contain. At the same desk a typist makes out a data card, which is handed to the recruit, which he carries on his trip thru the receiving station.

The card has space for his full name, race, local board location, serial draft number, order number, army serial number, the date he reported at Camp Funston and the date of his induction. The recruit is asked to verify the spelling of his name before he leaves the desk. This card subsequently is initialed by each man who examines him, and at the conclusion of his induction into the service, a clerk will tell if it is properly filled in and that there is no duplication of records.

He next passes an officer who takes possession of and checks his valuables, money, jewelry, etc., and these are placed in an envelope. This property is returned to him upon completion of the tour of the station.

Next comes the express and parcel post desk. The recruit is divested of his civilian clothes and is left in his Father Adam costume. Shipping tag receipt for the clothes and card in hand, he goes to tables provided for wrapping and there surrendes his clothes. He gives instruction for sending them home, or otherwise for their disposition, and gives the shipping tags to enlisted men detailed to do the wrapping.

Here he is issued a barrack bag containing such articles of clothing, equipage and ordnance supplies as are of standard size and do not require special measurements. His name and serial number are written on a tag which is tied to the bag, and bag on shoulder, and card still grasped in hand he enters the runway to the latrine. Arrived there he is met by a guide who takes charge of bag and card.

A cake of soap and towel are handed him and he is told to bathe. Ablutions performed, he again takes possession of bag and card and still nude continues his journey through a chute to the medical department. He again surrenders the bag, which is checked. A line of doctors stand awaiting him, Heart, lungs, orthopedic, venereal, neuro-psychiatric and tuberculosis specialists have their offices here. The recruit has his chest thumped, his heart examined, must walk, jump and go through paces and finally must stand mental tests before his medical examination is completed. If the preliminary tests do not show him sound to the core, he is sent to whichever one of the specialists his case seems to demand. If rejected, he is discharged from the draft, his clothes returned, and he is sent home within twenty-four hours of his arrival in camp.

On completion of these tests his barracks bag is returned to him and he continues on his way. His next stop is in the clothing room, which is arranged with long aisles and counters. Being nude, his first garments are a suit of underwear, with two extra to put into the bag. Sox, olive drab shirts, gloves, etc., are given him and after outfitting him the surplus goes into the bag. Into another room he goes, where breeches, coat, hat, leggings, and overcoat are issued to him and tried on.

His issue of clothing, now complete and signed for by the recruit and supply officer, he passes to the record room. Clerks make out his service record, which is to follow him all thru the journeys to come. His enlistment record is completed and his allotment of part pay to some of the home folks is made out.

An army serial number is given him and stamped upon his data card and all other records.

The personnel office is next and there he must answer questions as to his life at home, the work he has done, the trade he has worked at and a complete and accurate classification of his working ability in trade or profession is made.

He now is assembled with about thirty others and sent to the detention camp, where they are to receive the inoculations which act as disease preventions.

In detention camp he has had some intensive training, and in the meantime his detention has given any latent physical ailment or contagious disease, of which he carries germs, time to declare itself. The period of isolation prevents the spread of epidemics such as were the unfortunate rule in the camp when men were received and assigned last fall.

In all this process of ticketing John Doe it has required two hours.

As Private John Doe now, he is ready to take the first lesson in "Attention."

FALL TERM OF SCHOOL.

School will open for the regular work of the school year on Tuesday, September 3 and the attendance of all pupils is expected on that day. Teachers will enroll pupils, assign seats, furnish each pupil with a list of books needed, and organize the work so that actual lessons may commence on Wednesday.

All pupils in Grades 1-6 who live south of Brown street are to report to the Barnum school. Pupils in Grades 1-6 who live north of Brown street are to report to the Hill school. All subprimary pupils will report to the Hill school. Pupils in Grades 7-12 will report at the Baldwin school.

The school buildings have been put in the best of condition during the summer vacation and coal sufficient for the entire school year is on hand. Seven new teachers have been added to the teaching force to replace those lost through resignation, marriage, or calls to army service. The cafeteria in the Baldwin school will open September 3 and it is hoped that an even larger number may be served than during the past year. The new moving picture machine has been installed in the Baldwin auditorium and will be much used this winter. Both Red Cross and Belgian Relief sewing classes will continue to meet in the rooms in the Baldwin school as during the summer, a special room having been set aside for the Belgian Relief work.

Supt. Vilet will be in his office in the Baldwin school on Monday, September 2, from 10 to 12 and from 1 to 3 to confer with parents having children who are to enter school.

WAR BOARD NEWS.

The Bloomfield Township War Board is working industriously making preparations for the Fourth Liberty Loan Campaign. A complete directory of the township population is nearly completed, and some new methods will be used in September, which, it is expected, will facilitate the work of selling Liberty Bonds and shorten the campaign. An immense amount of detail work is being done at present, and it has been found necessary to hire a secretary, Miss Lane, in order to compile the records in systematic shape. The members of the board pay each subscribed $10 to help pay the secretary and other necessary office expenses, but many money will be required for these purposes. The public-spirited citizens of Birmingham and the township do not expect the members of the War board, who of course are serving without compensation, to also pay all the organization expenses. Subscriptions for this purpose will be received at Miner's grocery store, Cobb's drug store, Shain's drug store, First State Savings Bank, and First National Bank, or may be sent directly to Walter F. Johnson, treasurer of war board, at the office of Whitehead & Standart Co., Birmingham. Let's show the war board that we are backing them in their patriotic work.

CONTROL OF TELEPHONE CO.

New York, July 21, 1918.

To employes of the Bell Telephone Companies:

Under the authority of the law and by the proclamation of the President possession and control of the wire systems passed to the Postmaster General as of August 1.

In a conference held in Washington last week were present the Postmaster General, the Government Operating Committee and representatives of the Bell Companies, the Post master General expressed most emphatically his appreciation of the service which the Bell Companies were rendering and that such improvement possible be made would be because of the additional power derived from the Government. He asked for the co-operation and assistance of those who had heretofore been responsible for the service.

The Postmaster-General was equally emphatic in the statement of his desire to conserve the value of the properties of the companies with a view of returning them when called upon so to do to the owners in as good condition as practicable, that it was his earnest desire that the owners should receive just compensation in the full sense for their use.

The Postmaster General, until other instructions are promulgated, desires the conduct of operations shall continue as heretofore and also states that no changes will be made until after consultation and full and careful consideration.

To all who are identified with the Bell Companies who have shown your fine sense of obligation and loyalty and fidelity to the country to the Public Service and to the property in the past and to whom the credit is due for the prestige and position of the companies in the public eye—it is asked and it is not too much to ask of you, that same loyalty, fidelity and devotion to the service under the new order of things; on your behalf such loyalty, fidelity and devotion to the service have been promised, knowing full well the spirit in which you would meet and respond to the request.

To do one's full duty in each position is the greatest obligation resting upon every person and is also the greatest opening to future preferment.
