THE GRODERY MAN.

'Tis fine to be, 'tween you and me, the retail grocery man; to sell the theses, yeast cakes and tess, by a cash or credit plan. To greet the folks with bran new jokes, when your feet are sehing fierce, then get some lard by digging hard, from the bottom of a time.

buz, of two or more telephones; then get the stuff, if ther's enough, for orders from Brown and Jones.

"Tis fun to chase about the place, in a retail grocery, where lemons spoil and high test oil spatters on your toggery. Where one will make the sad mistake, of putting up cheer for tax; and then rust to tep blocks or so to make it risks.

and then must go ten blocks or so to make itright, you see, On quiet days, the grocer plays, just sorting peaches or yams; or sprouting spuds in worn out duds, or scraping spuds in worn out duds, or scraping the mould fromhams.
