Know What Geode Is?
When next the reader goes on a trip in the mountains it will be well for him to keep a sharp lookout. Perhaps he may discover a geode. Probably he does not know how a geode should look, but if he chances upon one he will immediately recognize it. For a geode is one of the most wonderful things in nature, says a writer. In the besting it was nothing more than a cavity in rock. Then water trickled into the cavity, leaving a deposit containing many beautiful elements. These elements in the course of time became crystals, and if they contained the necessary ingredients the crystals evolved into gems. Suppose for a moment that some of the minerals became mixed with the crystals. Then they would turn to a myriads of a hue and beauty quite past description. It is the interior of a geode that is priceless. Some have been found in which a small amount of water still remained in their center, confined there for thousands of years, millions, of years. By turning them this way and that, the water could be plainly seen to move.

Reporters Have Limitations.
The average police reporter knows his limitations and never attempts to write up a swell vignette. If you are going to commit suicide or murder send for the police reporter, but if you are going to get married please call on the society reporter.—Acheson Globe.

For Little Brown Men.
In Japan the early part of the month of May is quite time for all little brown boys, because it is at that time that the birthday of every one of them is celebrated, notes a writer. The big general birthday party is famous, known as the "fish festival." During the fish festival every family in which there is a boy proudly displays a flag by a flag that floats from a pole in the dooryard. It is desirable to have as tall and as big a pole as possible; so in order to get this kind of a pole, it frequently happens that several families will club together and make one birthday pole do for all. This pole is then adorned with as many flags as there are little boys in the several families.

"How-do-you-do," said Mr. Moon. "How-do-you-do," said Mr. Sun.

"Well," said the Queen of the Fairies, "how does it happen that you two old fellows are saying 'how-do-you-do' to each other and are up at the same time?"

"Oh, Fairy Queen," said Mr. Moon, "haven't you often seen me off in the distance, rather faintly, while Mr. Sun was only beginning to think of going to bed? Sometimes I've come up quite early in the afternoon to have a look around at the world. I have to put on my shirt for everything is so dazzling. Mr. Sun is such a bright old chap."

"Sun, thank you," said Mr. Moon. "I'm so glad you think so."

"But tonight," said Mr. Moon, "I'm not up so much ahead of time, and I'm not wearing such a heavy shirt. I wanted to have a chat with Mr. Sun. That's why I said 'how-do-you-do' to him so politely."

"I hope I'm not interrupting," said Mr. Moon, making a low bow. "You're always being so kind."

"You are indeed," said Mr. Sun. "I'm delighted to see you and agree with my old friend Mr. Moon."

"Well, I never knew you were such friends before," laughed the Fairy Queen.

"We don't see so much of each other. It is true," said Mr. Moon. "That's because our working hours are different. And our sleeping ones are too for that matter. But just the same, we're great friends," he ended.

"We are, we certainly are," said Mr. Sun.

"Want you continue to have your talk?" asked the Fairy Queen.

"I had been taking a ride that afternoon in her new airplane, which was made out of white and silver cloth. She was resting high in the air now that Mr. Sun and Mr. Moon were talking, and she stayed just about in between when they both flew."

"We'd be glad to," said Mr. Moon. "We'd like to join in now and again. We'll work to your opinion upon so many things."

"Yes, everything under the sun and moon, as they say," Mr. Sun added.

"Why do they say that to begin with?" asked Mr. Moon.

"Well, under the sun and moon so important?"

"It does seem strange," said Mr. Sun. "And they say that to begin with. Let's talk about everything that's just as high up as the sun and moon. No, they want to talk about the things that are under us."

"I don't understand," said Mr. Moon.

"Perhaps the Fairy Queen can tell you," said Mr. Sun.

"It's this way," said the Fairy Queen.

"Which way?" asked Mr. Moon. "do you mean the Milky way?"

"Perhaps you mean the sunny path?" asked Mr. Sun.

"No," said the Fairy Queen. "I simply want to explain to you what people mean when they say they're going to talk of everything under the sun and moon."

"We're anxious to hear," said Mr. Moon.

"I'm especially anxious," said Mr. Sun. "to find out what it means before I go to bed. I am getting so sleepy now."

"It means that people have to talk about things under the sun and moon because they don't know of things up in the sky so well. They know about the earth where they are living, and about animals, flowers, trees and such other things."

"She had been such a good girl," said Mr. Sun.

"So when they talk they like to hear all the news of the things and creatures under the sun and moon—because they're so familiar with them. But they love the sun and moon too, for they are so unhappy when they don't see Mr. Sun in the morning and Mr. Moon in the evening."

"But Mr. Sun was growing very sleepy. 'I must go to bed,' he said."

"Thanks for calling on me, Mr. Moon. And I'm ever so glad to have seen you Fairy Queen. Good night. That is good morning to you Mr. Moon. For nighttime is your daytime."

"So it is," said Mr. Moon, "and good night to you, for it's bedtime for you and all the creatures under you and under me."

"And the Fairy Queen flew back to tell the fairies of her talk with the sun and moon."

The newest thing in fashionable war activity is to become a member of a "War Savings Society," or to organize one yourself and develop it to the utmost limits of membership.

Says F. Howard Russ, Director of Publicity for the National War Savings Committee in Michigan: "The movement has spread throughout schools, business offices, manufacturing establishments, hotels, etc., and has now been given the hearty endorsement of the Federation of Women's Clubs, which comprises the leading social and literary clubs of the fair sex throughout the State."

Organizing one of these War Savings Societies is simplicity itself. Such a society is open to recognition by the National War Savings Committee as soon as it has an enrollment of ten or more members, each of whom pledges him or herself to the purchasing of a stipulated number of Thrift Stamps or War Savings Stamps in a given period of time in recognition of their spirit of patriotism. The Government bestows upon members of these War Savings Societies designating degrees of service. Not only every individual who becomes a member given an attractive badge bearing the design of the torch of Liberty encircled with the words, "War-Savings Service," but special badges are also conferred on those securing additional members, on star indicating the securing of ten new members, two stars indicating that twenty-five have been secured, three stars, fifty new members, four stars, one hundred and five stars, indicating that a worker has secured two hundred new members for his War Savings Society.

An enumeration of all the clubs, as well as of the individuals, prominent in Michigan society who have inaugurated these Thrift Clubs throughout the state, would be too lengthy for space at our disposal, but so important is this phase of W. S. S. work in itself that it deserves special consideration on the part of those who have not become War Savings Society members or boosters.

SPEAKING OF Thrift Stamps
