GOVERNMENT NEEDS
THOUSANDS OF WOMEN.

More and more, as the war progresses, is the Government depending upon women to perform the tremendously increased volume of work in the civil branches. The force of civilian employees in Washington, D. C. increased from 30,000 to approximately 70,000 during the first year of our participation in the war. Of this increase of 40,000 more than 25,000 are women. Women make up the increase in Government departments and establishments outside of Washington in the same proportion.

The United States Civil Service Commission is calling for women for Government work of not less than 60 different kinds. The list includes stenographers, typists, bookkeepers, other clerks of a more or more of some special or technical nature, statisticians, operators of various kinds of calculating, adding, and duplicating machines, proof readers, clerks, welfare executive secretaries, and telephone operators, trained stenographers, chemists, physicists, library assistants, inspectors of undergarments, and others.

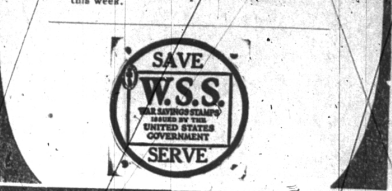

The Commission urges women to offer their services to the Government at this time of great need. As women are called to the colors, women must take their place and keep the machinery behind the armed forces moving at the maximum of efficiency. Representatives of the Civil Service Commission at the post offices in all important cities are prepared to furnish definite information and application blanks.

Mrs. Kate A. Morse, of Pittsburg, Kans., sister of Ira Reed, is with him and his sister Mrs. R. Van Every for a visit. Mrs. Morse comes from Chicago, where she has been visiting friends for some months. She is a school teacher of note in her home.
