The handling of logs by means of a crane equipped with a good grapple is not only more spectacular than the old method, but it effects m immense saving in labor and has made it possible to pile logs to a great height. Similar outits are used in handling ties, posts, pulp wood, &c. The grapple is made like a chambell bucket except that the scoops are replaced by curved steel thes, in the grasp of which a large number of logs can be beld at once.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.
