Captured German Colonies Are to Be Placed Under International Control.

WILSON'S PLAN IS ADOPTED

British Dominions Protest in Vain—Mandatories of League of Nations Will Rule the Territories—Little Progress With Russian Problem.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Germany's lost colonies occupied much of the time and attention of the peace delegates last week, and the result of their deliberations apparently was that "these colonies, and probably some of the territories that are to be separated off the Turkish empire, are to be internationalized by being brought to governments designated as 'mandatories' by the league of nations. These mandatories, presumably, will have a certain liberty of action in exercising their control of the colonies, and the league, it is supposed, will enforce by safeguards, a system very similar to that used by the British colonial administration.

This disposition of the former German possessions, if it is finally accepted by the peace conference, will prove another triumph for President Wilson, for while he has yielded some ground in compromise, it is mainly his idea. The British imperial cabinet accepted his theory, despite the strenuous objections of the representatives of the British dominions, and the admission of France also was announced. Japan was not very well pleased, and neither was Italy.

In another way this decision, if made, vindicates Mr. Wilson's ideas, for it is admitted that the creation and maintenance of the league of nations is necessary to carry out the colonial plan, and the president asserts that, inasmuch as the league was unanimously agreed to, it is necessary to turn the colonies over to the league under the protection of the league's best fitted to hold them.

The question of the German colonies developed the most serious diplomatic contest the conference has engaged in, and at the time of writing the end of the fight was not in sight. These colonies were Germany's greatest asset, and some of the allied nations had counted on them to make up in part their immense financial expenditures in the war. Secret agreements had been entered into giving Australia and New Zealand the German possessions south of the equator and giving Japan the Caroline and Marshall Islands. Despite the action of the British imperial cabinet in London, the British delegates to the conference were unanimous to stand by these agreements. The representatives of Australia and New Zealand were especially insistent on their claims, and were supported by the Japanese, who expected in return the support of Great Britain for positions in the Shantung peninsula and Manchuria. The South African representatives also were determined on having the plan worked out in return for the rebellious elements there that are still agitating for an independent South Africa.

would be granted as a means of re-compensating war losses. The dividing up of the spoils of victory, they held, would be in absolute violation of the principles that the allies of commerce and small nations shall be protected. It was understood that if Italy agreed to the internationalization plan, she would surrender her claims to Rome and the Dalmatian coast as also her possessions, perhaps being given control of the latter until the territory is ready to assert the principle of self-determination.

The supreme council tentatively decided that the spend of lawlessness in Turkey made it necessary that allied troops should be sent there, and the military representatives were directed to prepare a report on the most equitable distribution of the mandatories among the allies. The occupation of Turkey will continue until the peace conference has determined on the future government of the Turkish territory. It is understood that Palestine, Armenia, Syria and Mesopotamia will come within the scope of the plan of dealing with colonies by the mandatories system.

The labor question has long been in the minds of the peace-makers at Paris, and their international commission on labor regulation is now considering an elaborate scheme for the international regulation of conditions of employment drafted by Mr. Barnes, British minister without portfolio, in conference with British trade unionists and representatives of India and the dominions.

The Polish commission of the supreme council, made up of representatives of America, Great Britain, France and Italy, prepared to depart for Warsaw. It is expected that the commission has a big job before it, for while the Poles themselves are working fairly harmoniously under the leadership of Paderewski, they are beset by enemies on three sides and are engaged in continual warfare. The Russian bolsheviks and the Ukrainians are unremitting in their attacks, and the Czechs are fighting a bitter war along their southern border. The former have captured a number of towns which they claim are properly within their boundaries. It is expected that they also have seized the mining regions of Karvin, upon which the Polish state relies largely for its mineral supplies.

This fighting, of course, is in direct disobedience of the recent order of the great powers, that all hostilities must cease everywhere, but the Polish representatives in Paris of the other fortifications. In the Archangel region they have forced the American and allied troops to withdraw quite a distance from their advanced positions, and they have driven a Russian battle off of the important city of Orenburg on the Ural river, on the other hand, they lost Sarapul, province of Tatarstan, to the Bolsheviks. Reports are being received from the Russian government that have been overthrown in Tashkent, capital of Russian Turkestan. In the Ukraine the soviet forces inflicted a severe defeat on an army of General Potemkin, and captured Ekaterinoslav. There is little to choose between the contenders there.

Just why the allied forces are in north Russia and what they are expected to do there is still much of a mystery, and it evoked the attention of the American press. California vigorously attacked the policy, or lack of policy, of the administration in this matter. The course that is being pursued is equally displeasing to many Britishers, and the French never did approve of it.

One important policy concerning payment by Germany is reported to have been settled by the peace conference. It was decided that while Germany must make full reparation for unpaid battle damage done, she and her associates will not be called on to pay heavy indemnities to reimburse the victors' nations for their war expenses. Nor will Germany be compelled to reimburse the victors' nations for the cost of the war.

On the eve of the assembling of the German national convention in Weimar, the Elect government seemed firmly seated in the place of power, though there was a possibility of complications that would dominate it. The Spartacists were in a logical minority, however, and there was every reason to believe the "revolution" would run the course laid out for it by the old-time leaders, who never had relinquished control actually. That change of form of government has not wrought a miraculous change of the German heart or the German intention to rule in the opinion of general opinion, the French commission, as it is of many less well informed persons. This view is borne out by the increase in the number of overt acts of rebellion, and by their native anti-Prussian and indignation when they realized that they might not be admitted to membership in the league of nations.

A French expert has summarized the policies of the present German government as follows: 1. Complete unity. 2. Restoration of the nation for administrative purposes. 3. A number of departments. 4. A number of provinces. 5. A number of states. 6. A number of provinces. 7. A number of states. 8. A number of provinces. 9. A number of states. 10. A number of provinces. 11. A number of states. 12.
