PRINCE BECOMES A HERO OF ANOTHER ADVENTURE WHICH INCREASES HIS POPULARITY.

Synopsis.—Her father and mother reported lost at sea when the Duraven, on which they had sailed for Europe, was sunk, Carolyn May Cameron—Hanna's Carolyn—is sent from New York to her teacher uncle, Joseph Stagg, at the Corners. The reception given her by her uncle is not very enthusiastic. Carolyn is also called by the stern demeanor of Aunt Rose, Uncle Joe's housekeeper. Stagg is dismayed when he learns from a lawyer friend that Carolyn has been in a practically penniless and consigned to his care as guardian. Carolyn learns of the estrangement between her uncle and his one-time sweetheart, Amanda Parlow, and the cause of the bitterness between the two families. Prince, the mongrel dog that Carolyn brought with her, and the boon companion of the honeymoon girl, is in disfavour with Uncle Joe, who threatens to dispose of him, but Prince becomes a hero and wins the approval of the Corners by routing a tramp in the act of robbing the schoolteacher.

CHAPTER VII. A Gunda's Walk.

Really if Prince had been a vane dog his ego would certainly have become unduly developed because of this incident. The Corners, as a community, voted him an approval that Carolyn hereafter he had been looked upon as a good deal of a nuisance.

After she recovered from her fright Miss Minnie walked home with Carolyn May and allowed Prince's delighted little nature to come home together on the "shake hands with teacher."

"Now, you see, he's acquainted with you, Miss Minnie," said Carolyn May. "He's an awful nice dog. You didn't know just how nice he was. He's almost everybody went to church and sent the children to Sunday school, which was held first."

The Rev. Anton Driggs, though somewhat misnamed, was a loving man. He was fond of children and he and his childish wife gave much of their attention to the Sunday school. Mrs. Driggs taught Carolyn May's class of little girls. Mrs. Driggs did her very best, too, to get the children to stay to the preaching service, but Carolyn May had to confess that the pastor's discourses were usually hard to understand.

"And he is always reading about the 'Begats,'" she complained gaily to Uncle Joe as they went home together on this particular Sunday, "and I can't keep interested when he does it. I s'pose the 'Begats' were very nice people, but I'm sure they weren't related to us—they've all got such funny names."

"Hum," ejaculated Uncle Joe, smothering a desire to laugh. "Flow gently, sweet Anton, does select his passages of Scripture mostly from the 'values of dry bones.' I'm sure you've got it about right there, Carolyn May."

"Uncle Joe," said the little girl, taking her courage in both hands, "will you do something for me?" Then, as she stared down at her from under his bushy brows, she added: "I don't mean that you aren't always doing something for me—letting me sleep here at your house and eat with you and all that. But something special."

"What is the 'something special'?" asked Carolyn May, cautiously.

"Something I want you to do today. You always go off to your store after dinner and when you come home it's too dark."

"Too dark for what?"

"For us to go for a walk," said the little girl, very earnestly. "Oh, Uncle Joe, you don't know how dreadful I miss taking Sunday walks with my papa! Of course you took 'em in the morning, for you had to go to work on the paper in the afternoon, but we did just about go everywhere, if you would go with me," the little girl added wistfully. "Just this afternoon, seems to me I wouldn't feel so—so empty."

"Humph!" said Uncle Joe, clearing his throat. "If it's going to do you any particular good, Carolyn May, I suppose I can take a walk with you. It was a crisp day—one of those autumn days when the wind comes from the north in the air, in spite of all the efforts of the sun to warm it.

Here and there they stopped to pick up the glossy brown chestnuts that had burst from their burrs. That is, Carolyn May and her uncle, Mr. Prince, after a single attempt to nose one of the prickly burs, left them strictly alone.

"You might just as well try to eat Aunty Rosa's strawberry necktie cushion," Prince said, with a look of scorn.

WOMEN SUFFERERS MAY NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, the may cause the other organs to become diseased.

"I didn't you ever catch yourself talking nonsense when you were making a speech?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "You have to give some indifference or five sentences they can't understand."
