HER DREAM OF JOY IS SHATTERED

Life on Lonely Montana Desert Ends Romance of College Girl.

Puyallup, Wash.—A romance staged at its beginning on the campus of the Washington Agricultural college at Pullman, its interruption when she was spirited away to the mountains of Tennessee, a clandestine correspondence and, after four years, to return to be wedded, and how her heart was broken by a life on a lonely Montana desert claim in a thorough 10 by 12 log hut, is a tale tragically told to

Her Love Was Put to the Test.

Judge J. D. Fletcher by Mrs. Mary D. Parkhurst before whom she is appearing for a divorce from the husband of her romantic youth.

With her heart filled with romance and the promise of happiness, Mary Williams, a daughter of Dr. John A. Williams, a Puyallup physician, was married to Marvin Parkhurst in 1917, and after a short honeymoon to relatives and friends the couple repaired to the husband's homestead in Montana, where, as she told the judge, her romantic vision shattered.

In a log cabin 12 feet long and 10 feet wide, with a dirt floor and a bed made with drygoods boxes supporting a pair of springs, a table improvised by nailing a board to the inner wall of the hut, and no chairs, the bride soon realized that her love was to be put to the severest test.

But when it was known that the stark wood soon foretold a visit and no medical assistance arranged for because her husband was a Christian Scientist, life became an unbearable burden. All the best and glow of a rosy life of love and devotion she had pictured to herself was broken and she fled with babe in arms to her nearest neighbor, 22 miles away.

Parkhurst is contesting the divorce on the ground that his wife knew of the conditions when she married him.

"John It's Time to Go to Jail Now"

Jesse City.—Thirty years is a long time to be married and even the most moonstruck of couples sometimes find it necessary to resort to some powerful diversion to make life a success for so long a period. Mrs. John Kelley, sixty, for novelty, has had her husband arrested four times a year.

John Kelley, seventy, was arraigned before Judge John A. Blair in special sessions, charged with beating his wife.

"What have you to say for yourself?" Judge Blair asked him.

"Nothing to it," said John Kelley. "My wife has a romantic disposition and imagines things. Four times a year since we have been married she has had me arrested."

"Discharged," said Judge Blair. "I'm sorry for you."

WILL LIVE WITH SAVAGES

Man, Disgusted With Civilization, to Sail for South Sea Islands in Thirty-Foot Launch.

Port Orford, Wash.—Announcing his intention to embark in a 30-foot launch for the South Sea Islands, where he expects to find an environment more in common with his idea of what the customs of civilized society ought to be, W. H. E. Morris, of Port Orford, Wash., has begun preparations for his long journey. Myrtle plans to spend the rest of his life with the natives of these islands.

Pays Fine; Asks Divorce.

Cincinnati.—Before she filed suit for divorce from Frank H. Reppert, former factory and magazine, Mrs. Sarah Reppert of Silverton paid a fine for him. She also gave John J. Wener, deputy sheriff, $5 to give Reppert with the divorce summons and requested he be asked to "mix away" from her. She charges her husband used liquor to excess. Reppert was arrested recently for jumping a bond.
