

Airplane Patrol for Forest Fires

Federal Forest Service Is Making Experiments With Army Machines.

FORESTER TELLS ABOUT TRIP

Gives Interesting Account of Experiences Together with Observations as to Feasibility of This Method of Fire Detection.

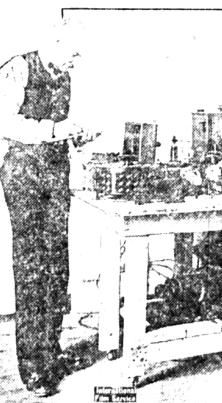

Washington, D. C.—A trip to the forest of the national forests by army machine was begun as an experiment for the forest service recently. The first forest patrol by airplane was made last week by a patrol of army machines. The patrol was made over the Edwards and Staunton forest preserves.

The trip was taken by Assistant Director B. C. Foy, who is in charge of the forest service. The purpose of the trip was to determine the feasibility of this method of fire detection, which should be done to help the forest service.

SHED LIGHT ON SUPERVISION GOLD STARS TOLD THE STORY

Youngster Put into Action the Effect School Officials Words Had on the Children.
A certain twin has a new school supervisor who is not an amateur as he might be. The president of the school board has heard complaints, but not until the other evening was he much affected by them. Then he happened to be watching his own and the neighborly youngsters playing school. His own seven-year-old wanted to be teacher, but was always turned down because of his youthful age. Finally when his progress had become pitiful, one of the other children said "Why can't you be Mr. Jones—the best supervisor you can be. Then you can visit our room."
