UNSPOILED BY HIGH HONOR

Officers and Men Alike Recognize in General Pershing Qualities That Compel Their Affection.

"Why do we swear by Pershing?" sputtered a staff officer in Washington one day in response to an objection. "Well, I guess it's because he's the real thing—a regular American, if you know what I mean.

"You can quickly figure out the sort of man he is by the stories they tell of him. I was with him when he was on his way to Washington to receive his orders for France. On the way, we passed through the town in which he arrived when he was a boy. On the station platform was the same old newspaper reporter Pershing had thrown stones at in his boyhood. The general chatted with the old man. Afterward I asked the porter what happened. He said:

"'He done wanted to know all 'bout they folks he uster know, an' when he was gettin' on the car again he picked up a pebble as big as my thumb an' hove it at me, jes like he uster when he was an ornery kid.'"

TOMMY IN HUMOROUS MOOD

And Possibly There Was a Little Sarcasm in Remark Credited to Real Soldier.

"Don't ever imagine that the British haven't any sense of humor," said Robert Chambers, the author, recently. "A friend of mine, just back from London relates an incident that shows that the Tommy, at least, has a funnybone somewhere in his anatomy.

"Three tall Tommies, disheveled, torn with wounds and altogether untidy, were on leave in London. As they stood in Trafalgar square there approached a detachment of the Windsor guard in silver trappings, waving plumes, red coats, long varnished boots shining like mirrors, and kid gloves.

"The Tommies looked on in silence for a moment and then one nudged his mate.

"'Lookin, Bill,' he whispered in an awed voice. 'There's sojers.'"

Jennie came home from her playmates, saying she was too mad to play with Jane any longer. Before night she teased to go back and play with Jane.

"I thought you were angry with Jane," her mother said.

"Oh, I was," replied the child, "but there wasn't mad enough in me to last all day."

The Picturesque Millinery of Midsummer

It is gloriously summer in millinery showrooms. Garden and field flowers make wide-brimmed, graceful hats radiant with color and headwear more joyous than it has been for many a year. For a long time flowers were all but banished as a decoration for fashion's peevish-minded public would not have them. A conviction grew and became settled that there lovely trimmings would not return, and of all things, flowers are the most logical "crown" for beautiful heads. When a season of bad millinery arrived, ahead with victory, they sprang into bloom. The beloved rose and violet and all the friendly little flowers and fruits are restored to favor and are fairly frolicking all over the picturesque millinery now in vogue. If flowers happen to be missing, then ribbons that look like flowers, or wings and such favor take the place of the real hats.

There are four hats for the heart of summer shown in the group above. A crown and a glorious rose is posed the top a broad-brimmed shape is against it. A smaller black hat has covered with crepe georgette in a bold crown, partly transparent and white, this beautiful fabric, which is a heir of millinery. It has also a sash scarf akin to flowers, makes a perfect for ribbon, but a choice of garden flowers background for the clusters of small fers shares the glory of a rose set in grapes that clamber about the crown. their midst.

They are in several colors, ranging between pale green and a soft purplish red, colorings of the natural grape. This is an adorable hat and suited to matrons as well as younger women.

Just below a distinctly youthful leghorn appears at the right of the group. Very wide satin ribbon in rose color is draped about the brim and crown in a sash that is knotted at intervals. This provides the color and shows of flowers and ends in a bow which droops from the brim edge at the back.

It would be a blank midsummer in the millinery world if there were no big black hats, more or less transparent, to flow in perfect lines about the head of the summer girl. This summer will boast many of them. At the left of the group above there is a hat having a crown of Italian straw and a brim of lace braid. Its edge wire is covered with velvet. There is a sash of lace, ribbon about the crown. Under the brim at the back is a cluster of flowers.

Something New in All-Day Dress

Now enters a rival of the tailored dress and the tailored suit, by way of making a pleasant variety in the all-day garb of the busy woman of affairs. This rival is very chic and very new and is bound to have many followers. It is the "all-day dress," sturdy enough to stand up to the tests of endurance that make the tailored dress an essential in the wardrobe and smart enough to fit in with almost any background which the day's rounds may provide for it. There is chance for the exercise of one's individuality in selecting or designing the all-day dress; it is an affair of individual taste and is successful in the proportion in which it is tasteful and original. Here is something each one may think out for herself.

The chic model shown in the picture appears to have a cloth skirt which is plain except for a border of cordings at the bottom. Ten rows of this cording are set in with tailored precision and the skirt is cut to slope in a little toward the hem. Over it there is a jacket of light weight satin, which would be effective in other silks as well. The satin is plaited in narrow knife-plaits pressed and stemmed so that they will remain. They are not sewed down anywhere, but are caught in the seams and where the jacket and girdle are tacked together. Pockets of the corded cloth are set on at the front. There are plain sleeves, elbow length and a fairly high round neck. A small choker of fur provides warmth when it is needed. The jacket is loosely confined at the waist with a crushed girdle of satin edged with a narrow plaiting of it and fastens with a handsome buckle. Taking it altogether, one can hardly expect to see a more attractive all-day dress than this. The smart hat worn with it matches it in character with its simple, wingtike bow across the front. The whole outfit will set off the young miss most immensely well.

FINE CROPS SURE

Outlook in Western Canada Never More Favorable.

Perfect Weather Conditions Enabled Early Seeding and Wheat Has Long Been Above Ground in the Land of Opportunity.

The greatest optimism prevails throughout every district in Western Canada. From the eastern boundaries of Manitoba to the slopes of the Rocky Mountains the farmers have been busy for three weeks in seeding operations. Last fall, even for Western Canada, it was an exceptional one. Threshing was completed at an early date, and the amount of fall plowing made ready for crop from fifteen to twenty-five per cent more acreage than in any year in the brief history of the country. Therefore there was ready for seeding this spring an acreage away beyond anything ever before experienced in that country.

On April 20 Calgary (Alta.) reported that in south country points there was a notable spirit of optimism amongst the farmers there. Moisture and weather conditions were good, while land in most places was in the best possible condition. More tractors were being put into operation than in any previous year. In some parts of the south country, however, there was a marked shortage of labor, but in the consideration of the country as a whole the labor outlook was bright.

Seeding operations were well under way in every part of Western Canada by the fifteenth of April. The practice of the farmers in that country is to commence as soon as the frost is out of the ground enough to allow the few inch seed bed to be worked up well. Beneath this the ground may still be frozen, but from this frost the young and tender wheat roots get the moisture at first so necessary to its existence. The warm days of spring and the long hours of sunlight that are ushered in with it thaw the frost out day by day and pay to the growing plant the moisture as it is needed. Nature's way of producing moisture to the young wheat plant is one of the chief reasons why Western Canada has become world famous as a wheat producing country. What may be said of wheat can as truly be said of oats and barley, and yes in fact, corn, too. Rapid and strong growth is stimulated in this manner. Heavy spring rains usually occur after seeding is over and the grain well above ground.

Already a report has been received, dated April 20, that a farmer near Carlyle, Saskatchewan, had 150 acres of wheat showing above the ground.

A good, strong and sturdy wheat plant is necessary when it is expected that there will be produced a forty bushel to the acre crop of wheat of a quality that will weigh out its sixty-five pounds to the measured bushel.

These spring wheat conditions represent but one of the reasons why Western Canada has been able to produce, with so little effort, world's record grain crops, wheat and oats that have carried off all champion ship awards at America's largest expositions.

Western Canada has this spring shipped ten thousand bushels of Marquis wheat, the variety that holds most of the world's championships, to Australia, where it is to be tried out. Seventy-five thousand bushels of the same variety has been sent to France to be used for seed.

The wheat lands of Western Canada are probably the most undervalued of any on the continent.

A comparatively small acreage of Western Canada's lands has been sold as high as $50 an acre. The greater portion of the best farming land in its unimproved state can be purchased at $25 an acre. The comparison between these prices and the annual revenue derived from grain growing alone will be quickly appreciated. It is but more fully impresses the with the certainty of a rapid increase in the near future in values.

Needless Alarm.

Junior had not been in the face of health, and, when he seemed well on the way to recovery, his mother took extra precautions to guard him against possibilities of an influenza attack.

One evening the anxious mother was startled when she entered Junior's room to find the little chap in bed, chuckling with red eyes and watery.

"Goodness, Jemima!" she cried, "do you feel sick, dearie?"

"No, mamma!" Junior replied.

"But you seem to have caught a dreadful cold."

"I haven't any cold."

"But your nose and your eyes?"

From under the covers Junior produced a book.

"It is 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' mamma," he said, "and I have just been reading about poor little Eva."—Youngstown Telegram.

Out of Order.

The village was all agog. Flossie Fluffert was marrying William Giles. The church was crowded. Flossie looking as pale as her somewhat highly colored countenance would allow, bore up until the plain band ring was safely on her finger, and then, everyone burst into tears.

The villagers were touched, but not jealous. All girls cry at weddings.

Then suddenly William Giles screwed up his face and broke into howls. Tears poured down his face and dripped off his whiskers.

"What's up? Hush, man!" those nearest him urged. But Giles continued to howl, and at last burst out:

"Let me be! I feel wuss 'an 'er about it!"—London Tit-Bits.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Womens complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay getting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at a drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.
