TRES ARROYOS, ARGENTINA

Moreno Boulevard, Tres Arroyos.

THE Department of Tres Arroyos, which was created by the law of October 30, 1865, is situated in the southeastern part of the province of Buenos Aires, and is bounded on the north by the department of Necochea, on the east by that of Lobería, on the south by that of Coronel Dorrego, and on the west by those of Coronel Pringles and Coronel Suárez. It is 1,200 square miles in area, and has a population of 50,000 inhabitants, of whom 15,000 live in the city of Tres Arroyos, the capital of the department.

The city of Tres Arroyos is the capital of the district of the same name, and is the commercial, industrial and political center of the section in which it is situated, and its people certainly have reason to be proud of their rapidly growing town. Laid out by the surveyors in the usual checkerboard manner, the original section of the city has progressed and developed until it has become a populous center with all the attributes of a large city, influential and powerful because of the industry of its inhabitants and the richness of the surrounding country. Its streets are well paved, and its buildings, many of them of modern architecture, are substantial and imposing. The streets are lighted by electricity, and the city has a complete system of sewerage and water supply.

The traveler who arrives at Tres Arroyos cannot fail to be pleasantly surprised on finding at a distance of 500 kilometers from Buenos Aires a beautiful city of modern construction, with modern urban developments and with traffic showing intense business activity. Its streets extending into the suburbs are paved with granite blocks, and it has many beautiful buildings, which of themselves are an index to the growth and prosperity of the city.

Fine Buildings and Boulevards.

The municipal palace, which is now in course of construction, the banks, school, commercial, and church edifices greatly contribute to the beautification of the town. Moreno Boulevard is a fine, wide avenue which fronts on San Martín Plaza, on this avenue are the buildings of the National, Spanish and Commercial banks as well as the offices of the Italian Society, the market and other structures. In the center of the boulevard is a beautiful park or garden. This is a popular place of resort, especially during the summer months, for the elite of the city.

Notwithstanding the great activity in building in Tres Arroyos, rents are very high there, due to the influx of population. The value of land in the center of the city varies from 10 to 60 pesos per square foot, the price depending greatly upon the location from the business section of the town.

On September 28, 1878, the first municipal committee of the department of Tres Arroyos was formed and on July 9, 1880, on the occasion of the celebration of national independence, the first municipal elections were opened to public vote. Since that time the prosperity of the town and the district has continued unabated. The municipal building already referred to, which is being erected on San Martín Plaza, facing the Moreno Boulevard, is not yet completed. The construction of this edifice, which was commenced in 1898, was temporarily discontinued. One of the floors, however, has been completed and is now occupied by the mayor's office.

District Is Very Prosperous.

The district of Tres Arroyos has 24 schools, 8 of which are urban, with a registration of 1,800 pupils, suburban with an enrollment of 200 pupils and 11 rural with 190 pupils. The principal industry of the district is agriculture, and the department of Tres Arroyos is one of the most important in the province. Because of the importance of its products, the attention which has been given to it by its officials and the enterprise of the inhabitants, it has undergone a development which has brought it to the front rank of the Pan American Union.
