A SCHOOL NEEDED.

The recent special election held to determine whether or not the people of this school district wanted to issue bonds aggregating $225,000 to build the proposed Adams Avenue school which was deferred everyone here knows the result. The opinions cast at the polls did not, we believe, mean that Birmingham does not need nor shall not have another school. It shows that the voters did not approve of the manner in which the School Board went about to obtain the building funds. Several letters from citizens who were, in a great measure, responsible for the results of the special election, show that Birmingham still needs a school and that they—the "No" voters—want a school. All that stands between the building, at present, and the negative expressions cast at the polls is an absence, apparently, of some business methods incorporated into the School Board's manner of doing business. Let those in favor of this project and those not so inclined get together—even if an open public meeting is called—and formulate some tangible and practical plans whereby the East Side can have their school.

building. Discussions of opinion can be welded to a compromise if people get together and talk it over."

WILL BRINGHAM HELP?

There is something about Yuletide that means more than the won't-erud displays of Christmas goods in the shops of merchants. The smiling eyes of an array of children who parents are blessed with an abundance of this world's goods are seen everywhere, mixed with the green and red of holly and the Yuletide evergreen. If one looks carefully, however, at the wan faces of those who, because of some unfortunate circumstance, are unable to mingle with their kinsfolk, The Birmingham Times' share of those folk is extended from many sources. Members of the Village Commission last Monday night appointed a committee of Mrs. James H. Wooster and F. W. Albert, administrator to the needs of the unfortunate worthy. The best chance, of course, will be their parts, as in the past. The Commission appeals to those who live in Birmingham, and nearby to respond. Gifts of money, discarded toys, food, clothing and anything that would add to the material comfort of Birmingham's worthy, the unfortunate, people are requested. All gifts should be mailed at once to the committee, in care of F. W. Albert, together—even if an open public meeting is called—and formulate some tangible and practical plans whereby the East Side can have their school.

THE GAS SITUATION

It is very fitting and proper that the Village Commission...

In response to many appeals from local citizens, should appoint a committee to investigate the local gas situation. The local gas situation is a matter of great importance to the Birmingham community. The Birmingham Times is a newspaper that is interested in the welfare of the Birmingham community.
