REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache. I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better. I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. You can publish this and I will tell any one who writes to me the good it has done me."—Mrs. MARGARET DANZ, 740 N. 25th Street, Phila., Pa.

It hardly seems possible there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

Prayed for Cure Finds it After 10 Years

Food Would Sour and Boil —Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awful bad. I would only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one third of it and began to feel relief, when it was three-fourths gone I felt fine. The solution it was used up I had no pains. When I got to another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how grateful I am that I found of EATONIC. I feel like a new man. I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.

NEW-FANGLED

By GERTRUDE ARMSTRONG

"No, Martha, there hasn't going to be no telephone. God sometimes seems to be spoiled my money for. Just cause Sarah and Fred has got such new fangled notions into their heads supposes you got to have the same. We've lived here all these years, and my folks before me, and never had any of these fool ideas until your sister started. Guess you'll be wanting an automobile next."

"Well, never mind," replied his wife meekly. "I just thought 'twould be kind of handy in case of sickness, living a mile from our neighbors and I get lonesome sometimes and could talk to Sarah."

Her husband made no reply, but went about the evening chores. 'Twas so unlike Martha to ask him to waste money on anything so foolish. Handy, indeed! There was old Molly, when ever she wanted to visit and to run into town, who would take her in less than an hour.

She so seldom asked for anything or complained that his conscience bothered him a little, and the look of disappointment on her face he found hard to get out of his thoughts.

Never, of some time soon, when he got his work along they would go into town for a holiday. She had been working pretty hard lately and probably needed a change.

And thus, like most of us he soothed his conscience with promises of better doing in the future.

When he returned to the house Martha was just finishing her dishes.

"I guess I'll go right to bed, John," she said, "I don't feel very smart to-night."

"Well, I would," he replied, looking at her keenly. "And take something hot for that cold. I don't like the way it's hanging on. Been this way now for most a week." And he kissed her and patted her kindly.

It was four hours later when he opened their bedroom door. He tiptoed softly to the bed, where she lay, eyes closed and apparently awake.

"Feeling some better, Martha?" he asked, bending over her. Then she opened her eyes and apparently closed the window, muttering as he did so, "More new fangled notions."

There was no response from the bed. What was the matter? 'Twas not at all like sweet tempered Martha to hold a grudge. He bent over her and then started back. The staring eyes and burning face did not look familiar.

"Ma, and see if David is covered, John! It's chilly tonight," she gasped.

David! Their boy who had been dead five years. Then it burst upon him—she was delirious. What should he do?

Get a doctor, of course. If he could only get word to Sarah! And his heart sank as the thought of the previous time he would waste driving all those miles.

"Oh, God, what would I give for a telephone!" burst from his agonized lips.

He rushed out to the stable for old Molly, backed her from her stall, and harnessed. His hands seemed palsied. It was ages before he got started. Driving with all speed he came in sight of Sarah's. They were up; he could see the gleam of lights through the trees and, jumping out, and with bursting heart he rushed in and told them his errand.

"What was there for him to do in his way, if she was unhappy?

She who had helped him save day by day, never complaining, always cheerful, when she had asked for a pair of wheels only recently and he had been refused, he selling it a waste of money, who but for just such a "new fangled notion" he would have lost the best little partner man ever had.

Many weeks after a handsome little runabout drove into the yard, from which alighted three men carrying with them a large box.

"Here's your auto, Mr. Cobb. The telephone men were coming out this way so I drove them over. If there is anything wrong let us know. Be over again by night. So long."

"Why, John, what does this mean?" asked Martha, when the men had started to work downstairs.

"It means that the men have been working for some time, and you're a-going to have that telephone, and if you don't like this here machine you're a-going to have another one, and pick it out yourself. They might be 'new fangled,' notions, but they've darned good ones to have around a house."

And Martha smiled and thanked him as only she knew how.

Too Much Green Tea Dangerous.

A correspondent's reference to green tea as a fruitful source of seeing visions reminds one that Sheridan Le Fanu, the author of the well-known study in horrors, "Doctor Silas," wrote three volumes entitled "Green Tea," packed full of thrills and shivers. The victim of green tea drinking was haunted by a monkey, or some beast of the ape tribe, that appeared to him on every possible occasion. Once when he thought he was quit of it it materialized, grinning and impish, on the seat of the mail coach. Sixty years ago green tea was freely recommended in any shocked wits-end night work, and it would be a pity if with the old-fashioned cough that a sleeplessness was induced which eventually is only relieved in extreme instances in middle life and old age.—London Morning Post.

Voice of Experience.

"Grandpa, what's the matter with Mrs. Fuzzleton's husband? Is he sick?"

"I'm not sure, my son, but—"

"Why say?"

"Because of what he goes wrong with the clothes-rack you'll find out exactly as I did—and it's all my eye."

Couldn't Get the Idea.

Elliott Flint had purchased a hunting dog which he called a setter, and the boy was greatly interested in it. After a few days of observation, however, he announced: "I don't see how you could have a setter. He never sits; he's always either standing or on the run."

MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE HAS RAPID GROWTH

In the winter of 1914 a law was passed by the State Legislature which paved the way for the organization of mutual automobile insurance companies. The result was the incorporation of the CITIZENS' MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE COMPANY of Howell, Michigan taking out their license to do business August 27th, 1915. The company grew rapidly. Within a few months a number of competing companies were organized until now there are nine competing companies in the state.

One of these smaller companies had assets of $887.80; another had assets above liabilities of $88.14; a third had assets in excess of liabilities of $1,126.55, while a fourth, $1,556, showed a surplus of but $60.27, according to their statements of January 1st, 1920.

The careful automobile owner is anxious to insure with a company having sufficient surplus on hand to pay the big claims. The CITIZENS' MUTUAL AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE COMPANY of Howell paid one liability claim in April, 1920, of $2,975, one fire claim of $2,975, a personal injury claim of $1,750. The company has never had to borrow a dollar and has always had sufficient surplus to pay its claims promptly. On account of the increased cost of automobiles and repairs it has made a slight increase in the cost of its policy. This has been approved by attorneys, bankers, business men and farmers.

THE STATEMENT OF THE COMPANY AS OF MAY 1st, 1920, IS AS FOLLOWS:

CLAIMS PAID	No.	Amount.
Since organization	3270	$435,092.98
First 4 months of 1920	506	72,716.85
During April, 1920	131	25,557.38

ACTOR ALSO PHILOSOPHER

Sir Herbert Tree Put on Record as Author of Two Really Witty Observations.

Apropos of two funny institutions, Sir Herbert Tree once said: "A man never knows what a big fool he is until he sees himself mimicked by one." He disliked flippery, and said so in these words: "Flattery makes the great little and the little great."

In person he was partial to a critic, he wrote on the margin: "To the worst of critics and the best of friends." His friend the critic was rather surprised with this curious inscription and asked Sir Herbert for a little explanation. Tree quickly replied: "When you put more butter into your criticisms, I'll say you are the best of critics and the worst of friends."

Wanted a Little Too Much.

Mary was the only girl and took an active part in the rough games of her brothers. The fact that she was a girl was a handicap which often spoiled her fun. One evening Aunt Lillie was entertaining Mary's mother by telling fortunes from cards. Mary showed such keen interest that Aunt Lillie asked her to make a wish while she cut cards for her. Of course the right card came up and the wish had to become true. But Mary would not believe.

"Now, please, dearie, don't you tell us what you wished for," her aunt asked.

After some hesitation Mary replied: "I wished I was a boy."

Hard Luck, Indeed.

The new baby brother was sleeping and Mary Elizabeth had been chided several times for playing and laughing rather noisily. "Oh, dear," she complained, "since that baby came I can't even whisper laugh."

Her Jewels Gone.

"Mrs. Sweetman has been robbed of her jewels and Mrs. Meanly is the only person to sympathize with her."

"Grandma: You don't mean to say that she stole it?"

"What else is it but stealing? She offered Mrs. Sweetman a cool $5 a week more and her friend accepted how she has theirs."—Boston Transcript.

AS IT APPEARED TO HIM

Hubby Had No Difficulty at All in Classifying His Wife as Species of Tree.

They are a husband and wife who have many quarrels. And she is not a fair antagonist, because she always keeps during every quarrel in order to win her point. The other night she brought home a new fur hat which she proudly exhibited to her husband, who did not like it, and proceeded to say so. "Why, it looks queer to even the dog," he ended. "Look how he's barking at it. He thinks it is a coon in a tree."

"Don't you call me a tree!" she stormed, and then began to cry. "I suppose you're going to say next that I'm either a quince or persimmon tree."

"No," he smiled blandly. "I should think a weeping willow would be a more appropriate name."

Barbed Wire Disease.

The name "barbed wire disease" as applied to certain war-stricken victims, is believed to have originated in Switzerland, and it applies to a very specialized functional nervous disorder. The symptoms, recognizable in most men confined more than six months behind barbed wire fencing, are seven in about 10 per cent of all prisoners. Increased irritability appears first, followed by diminished power of concentration, and then much complaint of loss of memory of persons and places. Insomnia is a secondary symptom. Some prisoners have diminished eyesight, many grow suspicious, all tend to pessimism.

No one is ever thankful enough that what he really did say was not repented.
