EARLE'S HYPO-COD WORKED MIRACLE, SAYS THIS LADY

Had Cough, Stomach Was Bad, Nervous and All Shot to Pieces.

FOR OVER A YEAR SHE GREW STEADILY WORSE

"About two years ago I had Pneumonia Fever which left me in a very weak, bad condition," declared this lady, "and I had a lingering cough that clung to me like death.

"I lost about twenty pounds and in spite of the prescriptions given me I continually became worse until I was a shell of my former self. My nerves were all shot to pieces and my stomach was so weak I didn't dare touch any heavy or solid foods. I lingered along for over a year getting weaker and weaker until that fortunate day when I saw where people here were praising a new medicine called Earle's Hypo-Cod.

"I went down to the drug store and bought five bottles and have taken them all and this wonderful medicine worked a miracle for me. Of all the miracles I ever heard of this was most wonderful. Why—I am feeling as good as I ever did in my life and the old cough is entirely gone. My appetite and digestion came back and my nerves are in good condition—I feel good all over and can't praise Hypo-Cod enough," declared Mrs. B. Chopperson, 88 18th St., Detroit, Mich.

Surely after reading the above, if you are in need of a good tonic to build, you will at once give it a trial. Drop in at the drug store tonight, ask the druggist about it. Read formula on bottle, ask your physician about the ingredients. Druggists, chemists and experts assert that it is very powerful, yet very pleasant to taste.

Earle's Hypo-Cod is sold here by all good druggists and the leading druggists in all nearby towns.—Adv.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent, it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

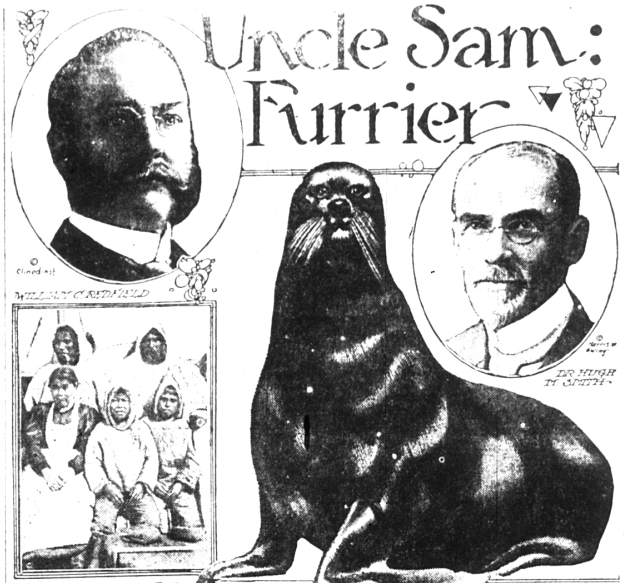
Uncle Sam: Furrier



UNCLE Sam is apparently a success as a furrier. This is a pleasing bit of news in these days when the hot pollsh seem to delight in taking a whack at the federal government. Anyway, it was only a few years ago that the conservationists were holding up their hands in horror over the threatened extinction of the once enormous seal herds in Alaska. Now, it appears, the seals are increasing greatly in numbers and probably will become as numerous as ever.

Moreover, a new American industry has been created. There never was any seal fur industry in the United States, though the United States was the greatest fur consumer in the world; now it has the largest and best, conducted under government supervision, along with it the government has been building up its products industry of which oil and meat are the chief items and is making use of the seals on the Pribilof islands to maintain the enormous herds of fur seal and to furnish the fox skin business.

Along with that goes the profits of the islands for seal bones for fertilizer, also a profitable industry, and the government has found ways to get a far greater yield of fur than ever before, while at the same time greatly increasing the herd.

When one says that the government has found means to increase both the yield and herd it may not strike the reader as so astonishing as it would be if put in another way. If fur seals could manage conservation they could increase the amount of timber taken out and at the same time increase the number of trees that would be cut annually in conservation; for also contrary to popular belief the matter of seals

The chief credit for these achievements lies at the door of Dr. Hugh M. Smith, the commissioner of fisheries, one of the foremost authorities on fish culture in the country. So says former Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield, who took Dr. Smith's ideas and carried them out. Mr. Redfield tells the story this

"We took hold of it in 1911 and found existing the five-year closed season, which forbade killing of seals and seals except the small number needed by the natives for food. That gave us plenty of time to plan for the taking up of the production on a large scale. This country was the largest producer of sealskin and the largest consumer of seal furs. But the process was that we would take the skins and ship them down to San Francisco or Seattle send them across the continent cross the Atlantic ocean with them and land them in London where they were dyed, dressed and made into finished furs and then were sent back again across the Atlantic ocean to the United States as an imported article, paying 30 per cent duty, to be consumed by our own people—one trip across the continent and two across the ocean.

"The economic wastefulness of that process needs only to be stated. The greatest being ours originally and the market ours. There was no adequate plant in this country for dressing, dyeing and machining sealskins. London had long had a substantial monopoly in these processes. In its original condition the sealskin looks nothing like the fur you see in the market. The skin is a yellowish gray with an outer layer of what are called guard hairs. The actual fur lies within the guard hairs and close to the skin, and on the removal of the guard hairs looks like a rather curly, soft silky wool, light brown in color. The process consists in removing the hairs without injury to the fur that lies beneath, in the tanning and dressing of the skin, the dyeing of the fur, and finishing it away. The government has a project by a machining process. There are by a machining process. There are by worth $2,000,000 on the two 150 separate operations on the skin Pribilof islands of St. Paul and St before it comes out the other end a George. beautiful fur, soft, lustrous, glossy, soft furs, and the whole thing is done in three months.

"In the United States there is nothing adequate of the kind. We arranged for the establishment of a for dressing, dyeing and finishing industry which should be the equal of anything in the world. We made this arrangement with a contractor, who established [illegible] at St. Louis. I employes something over 500 hands and the establishment has facilities for [illegible] on earth and will soon be the finest product in the world. During the last year of closed season with the limited number of furs we were able to obtain from the natives and the catch of the season by the very way, able to get its hand in for the increased business that was to follow and train us how for handling the processes on a larger scale. A number of experts from Great Britain volunteered their services and [illegible] part in the [illegible] Commissioner Redfield, who took Dr. Smith's ideas and carried them out.

"In 1918 we renewed the commercial killing of seals. The quota was fixed at 25,000, but we took 21,851 skins. In the year 1919 the quota was 15,000 and the total number at the end of August, practically the close of the season was 23,981.

"The result has been an immense saving to our government in the cost of handling the property and a very much greater return to the government in the shape of profit.

Here Mr. Redfield illustrated his point by giving the figures of a single sale held Oct. 7, 1918. The number of skins sold was 15,002. The gross proceeds were $777,901. The expenses, including cost of preparation of skins, transportation, agents' commissions and [illegible] aggregated $293,105.22. Thus the net proceeds on this single sale were $484,795.78, leaving a tax $344,737.78. At this same sale the government contractor sold fox skins numbering 692 blue and 10 white pelts. The gross receipts were $58,170.50, the expenses were $6,230.50, and the proceeds were $51,938.50.

"In that same blizzard," resumed the ex-secretary, "the government owns the finest herd of foxes in the world. We feed the foxes with the offal of the slaughtered seals supplied from our new by-products factory. We breed for the cleanness of pelts and the refined a lot of valuable material which was being thrown away. We set up a rendering plant at first for trying out the blubber. The plant cost $2,000 and paid for itself in the first year, and for itself all. It is the intention of the department to develop such of the seal as is fit for food, while the offal is used for fox feed.

"We discovered there what have been nicknamed Redfield's Old Bones. It was a deposit of seal bones which had accumulated for over a century. Some of these deposits were several feet thick and ran for over 100 miles. In 1919 we got [illegible] pounds out of them. They are excellent fertilizer. Tractors and trailers are at work there. Then we put in use a power lighter to Unalaska, 150 miles away, bringing back coal. The lighter forms the superposed collar and appears in the turned-back front. Such a negligee is useful on a journey, for it can be worn on hotels and is especially easy to get into as only two fastenings are required to hold it in place. The draping is unusual and the [illegible] of the sleeves original and interesting. In short and in the [illegible] this model is a delightful [illegible] about the [illegible] the designer pays tribute to Japan, but otherwise this negligee does not suggest a kimono.

First American Novelist

The man who is usually referred to as the first American novelist and whose claim to the title seems to be undisputed was Charles Brockden Brown who was born in Philadelphia in 1771 and died in 1810. His best novel, "Wieland," is a morbid horror story, based on ventriloquism, and while improbable it contains scenes of great power. He published several other novels, and in 1799 a book on diplomacy and marriage which commanded many views then considered very radical but now widely accepted. No other novels than his were published by a native American until the appearance of "The Spy," by James Fenimore Cooper, in 1821.

Islands of the Antilles.

Earthquakes and hurricanes are familiar phenomena in Martinique. Likewise Guadeloupe, which is really two islands, called Grande Terre and Basse Terre, a narrow arm of the sea separating them. The former is mostly lowland with extensive sugar plantations while Basse Terre, despite its name, is rugged with cloud-capped mountains that show distinct signs of volcanic activity. Not far to the south are the Saintes islands which, being regarded as one of the strategic points of the Antilles, are formidably fortified.

THE JURY'S DIFFICULTY.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said a judge as he concluded his charge, "if the evidence shows in your minds that pneumonia, even indirectly, was the cause of the man's death, the prisoner cannot be convicted." An hour later a messenger came from the jury room. "The gentlemen of the jury, your lordship," he said, "desire information." "On what point of evidence?" "None, your lordship; they want to know how to spell pneumonia."

Earnestness Pays Best

No honest man dare play the trifler. The very thought is repugnant to him. He wants to be rated 100 per cent a man. He wants his word to count for full measure. So he rises above the fickleness of the trifler. He becomes known for what he does and what he stands for. He may not always realize his ideals, but he tries to make every effort worthy of the name he bears. By acting the man he becomes better than he follows and his rise to power is the reward of doing what is best. He knows that talent is discounted in the recognized trifler and sees to it that he keeps above suspicion. There's nothing in the trifling game to make a man covet it. There is much to make it despised.

And Now?

Some hundreds of years ago mummies were powdered into dust and made into powders and potions for the cure of disease.

WHAT YOU WILL WEAR IN NEGLIGEES

"ANYTHING you will" appears to be the attitude given fair woman this season in the choice of negligees. They are here in supple silks and in transparent fabrics following many paths in the quest of style and drawing inspirations from many lands. One has to look twice at some of them in order to decide whether they are really meant for indoor wear or are colorful extravaganzes in evening coats. They are made in lines familiar to us in wraps for evening wear. There are others of airy materials, lace, chiffon and georgette that are suited to the tropical air of steam-heated houses or the lands of perpetual summer and there are many attractive but simpler models in crepe de chine, satin, flannel to give more every-day satisfaction than their fancier rivals.

The wrapping garment which has been selected for illustration is beautiful and practical. It is made of two colors, in satin which forms the lining as well as the wrap and may be interlined if the finer depend on it as a protection against chill. It is very handsome in high colors with rose-colored lining, but there are any number of beautiful color combinations in which it may be made. The lining forms the superposed collar and appears in the turned-back front. Such a negligee is useful on a journey, for it can be worn on hotels and is especially easy to get into as only two fastenings are required to hold it in place. The draping is unusual and the [illegible] of the sleeves original and interesting. In short and in the [illegible] this model is a delightful [illegible] about the [illegible] the designer pays tribute to Japan, but otherwise this negligee does not suggest a kimono.

RIVALS IN TINY GIRL'S GARB

HERE are two garments designed for the little girl of three or more years, that have everything to recommend them, which means that they are sturdy, good looking, easily made and laundered and up-to-date in style. They are rivals, for one is a frock similar to those worn by little maids for generations, and the other is a very modern example of apparel designed for their very name proclaims rompers. Their very name proclaims the emancipation of small girls from the tradition of skirts.

In passing it is worth noting that bloomers have replaced petticoats for wear under the frocks of little girls, in all their everyday garb. They are gaining in favor for older girls and for grownups, giving greater freedom in walking. Rompers serve as a combination of dress and bloomers, a two-in-one arrangement that saves in sewing, in material and in laundry work.

For the dress pictured, chambray, gingham, cotton poplin or any of the strong cotton goods will prove appropriate. It could hardly be more simply made being merely a full straight skirt shirred onto the narrowest of yokes, a mere band of the chambray with flat shoulder straps attached and a decorated braid applied to it. The skirt is cut long enough to turn up in a very deep hem, bordered with the fancy braid. Pique is made in the hem for two real pockets, much to the delight of little wearers, who always dote on pockets. There is a bow of chambray, bordered with braid, placed jaunty for ornament and having no other use whatever, thus proclaiming that the frock is intensely feminine, and furthermore the underclothes is made of dainty white batiste. The braid used for trimming reveals many scalloping ribbons woven in colors on the loom. It is one perpetual round of joy when one owns frocks like this to put on of an afternoon, or to wear to school.

The bloomers illustrated are made of light checked gingham and finished with white embroidered bands in a fairly heavy quality. They are very full and flare out at each side like a dancer's frock. There is a plain belt about the waist with flat pearl buttons on it. This particular pair of rompers is of pink and white checked gingham, only the simplest of designs in embroidery are to be chosen for rompers. Very simple hand hemstitching on collars for little folks is still in great demand, but machine lace trimming does very well, as the two examples pictured will prove.

Trimmings Are Interesting.

The vogue for the drooping bonnet is leading to many interesting trimmings. The ear tabs, a residue from the Egyptian vogue of the spring, fall quite frankly to the sides of some hats. Feathered quills of glycerine ostrich, or the newest owl quills are thrust through the brim of the hat to brush the shoulder. Bunches of real ostrich plumes over brow to the shoulder or cling to the under brim. A curious by-product of the drooping trimming is the little curtain or frill of the hat, velvet or sometimes

Smart Short Blouse.

The dress artists in Paris are showing some exceedingly smart short blouses in silk voile, linen and crepe de chine. These blouses are exactly the same color as the coat and skirt with which they are worn—rust red, navy, pale gray, the uniformity of that is exceedingly distinguished, though at first our unaccustomed eyes seem to demand a touch of white."

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson of Buffalo. "One cent I would rather see than a thousand dollars.

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment to sell at all druggists for 35 cents a large box."

Dear Sirs:—

"I was an untold sufferer from old running sores and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had been my companion for years, and after using but nine dollars' worth of the stuff I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6½ inches, is all healed and I am walking. Never, never will I be without Peterson's Ointment.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it."—Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southwick, Medina, N. Y. Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

Locating the Heart.

"Home is where the heart is," remarked the man of sentiments. "Yes," commented Mr. Bifflng, "but I wish my husband wouldn't keep my heart in my mouth."

A woman's fondest hope is to stay young. She often resorts to paints, powders and cosmetics to hide her years. Some women pay large sums to so-called "Beauty Doctors" in the belief that money will buy youth. Others wear girlish dresses, thinking they can fool the world about their age. But no one is deceived. The more you try to hide your age, the more it shows.

There is but one thing that holds old age back, and that is health. Sickness and weakness bring old age early in life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a building-up medicine for women. It makes them healthy and strong when they suffer from women's troubles. It keeps them looking young by keeping them well. It is a woman's tonic for the frail, the delicate and those who are nervous, dizzy and who have backache and dragging pains. Favorite Prescription is altogether vegetable and without a particle of alcohol. It is safe to take. Try it now. In tablet or liquid form at all druggists, or send 10c for trial package of the tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.
