Experiments Show Pigs Make More Gain Than When Hand-Fed by Man and Eat Less Too.

Expenses may be made less by the use of the self-feeding plan in preference to the hand-feeding system, the hog lot. An experiment was conducted at the Kansas State Agricultural College to show the value of the self-feeding in fattening 25-pound pigs and at the same time to show the amount of tankage required to balance the ration.

The pigs in lot one ate more corn and less tankage than the hand-fed pigs in lot 2. That a 5 per cent tankage could balance a corn ration in fattening 25-pound pigs was shown from this experiment, because the self-fed pigs consumed one part tankage and 20 parts of corn.
