For the pleasure of Mrs. W. R. Corey of West Maple avenue, who leaves the village soon to make her home in North Adams, Mich., a delightful surprise was arranged and given Thursday evening on the spacious grounds of the Masonic Temple on South Woodward avenue. The affair was in the form of a musicale and was given by the local Eastern Star order, under the immediate auspices of the newly appointed entertainers committee. The guest of honor was presented with a most suitable gift during the evening which had been previously selected by the Committee of Courtesy. The program was well arranged and provided to be exceptionally enjoyable to the guests. Refreshments were served during the evening and Mrs. Corey was given a farewell message of good wishes to carry to her new home and the speaker also very deeply lamented the fact that the Order of the Eastern Star was to lose one of its most worthy and dependable officers. Mrs. Corey is Associate Worthy Matron of the organization, having been elected to that office early this spring.

AT THE GARRICK

One of the most highly amusing and entertaining of comedies, "Adam and Eva," is the offering of the Bonstelle Company at the Garrick Theatre this week. Though this play had its premiere at the Garrick and has been presented here on three occasions, it ranked highest in the requests for plays received from Bonstelle patrons, most of them remarking to the effect they desired to see Frank Morgan play Adam Smith.

All In a Day's Work

His gun held ready, his eyes glancing about eagerly, a man in hunter's garb moved silently through a North Michigan swamp. Suddenly the beat of flapping wings sounded. Quickly raising gun to shoulder, he fired. "A miss!" he growled disappointedly as the duck rose high into the air and disappeared from view. But—had the duck hunter missed?

In a telephone booth in a hotel 30 miles distant, that same evening, a brisk, alert-looking business man put in a call for Detroit. Ordinarily, ten minutes would suffice for the connection. The business man waited. Finally, with the explanation that the delay was due to poor transmission, the operator announced that Detroit was on the line. The operator then immediately notified the Repair Department of line trouble.

Called from his bed that night (it was raining) one of the repair men went out to investigate the trouble. Following the toll lead, he drove more than a score of miles in the darkness and rain and tramped additional miles through a swamp. Using a flashlight, he finally found the source of the trouble—an insulator that had been shot off.

Interruptions in telephone service, we repeat, may be due to a thousand and one causes. The foregoing is a statement of an actual incident. A thousand similar stories could be written. The point is just this: Through all such difficulties, night and day, regardless of weather conditions, the people of the Telephone Company are doing their duty to the public by being constantly on the job to keep service up to its high standard.
