CHAPTER XVI—Continued.

Molly ran behind the blazing divan... "What do you want to do, father?" she whispered.

"I'll tell you, take 'em back, the trail that strikes off from the road below... Molly nodded and went to the door.

LAND OF DARK SUPERSTITION

Throughout His Life, the Moor is Guided by Strange, Sometimes Most Savage Beliefs

One of the first things a traveler notices in a Moorish town are the "hands," painted or drawn, on the walls of many houses and buildings.

Offerings of food, hair and other small articles are often placed in the hands, and they are believed to have a quaint significance.
