THE LEGION OATMEAL COOKIE

Recipe Submitted by Mrs. Frederick Gehlman, Springfield, Ill., Wins International Contest.

Mrs. Frederick Gehlman of Springfield, Ill., presents the national cookie to the country. The recipe which has been pouring daily national headquarters for over a year in the American Legion Auxiliary during the past two months, is the "Oatmeal Cookie" which was selected to fill the jars in all the Legion hospitals throughout the United States.

Although no prize was offered in this unique contest, recipes came in from all parts of the United States and from Alaska, Canada and Hawaii. So it was that the winner hailed from our own Middle West. The judges selected Mrs. Gehlman's cookie recipe for use in the hospitals because it has combined food value with little fat content. It makes a mighty good tasting cookie, too. Here it is:

1 cupful oatmeal 1 cupful raisins
1 cupful flour 1/2 cupful salt
1/2 cupful butter 1/2 cupful lard
1/2 cupful baking powder 1/2 cupful butter
1/2 cupful rolled oats 1 egg (well beaten)

Process: Flour the raisins. Cream the fat in a mixing bowl, adding the sugar gradually. Add the egg, then after stirring them together, then the oatmeal and lastly the floured raisins. Using a wooden spoon, mix in a greased and floured baking sheet. Put into a fairly hot oven (350 degrees) and bake 10 to 15 minutes.

Mrs. W. J. Hines of Indianapolis, Indiana, presented a domestic science expert, and the members of her "four" class acted as judges for the contest. They selected as an alternate to the "National Cookie" another "oatmeal cookie" which they would recommend for general use. It contains a larger percentage of fat than the "National Cookie" of Virginia, Ohio, sent in.

The vote gave Mrs. Mary B. Snodgrass of Highland Park, Mich., second ranking, and the third ranking prize to a "cream cookie" with small fat content, sent in by Mrs. Mary E. Robinson-Walks, Washington, D. C.

OHIO LEGION MAN MISSING

Joseph Baker Post, No. 319, Toledo, O., is seeking the whereabouts of Clair A. Anthony, who has disappeared from his home in Toledo, Ohio, since the night of August 15, 1920. He is 27 years old, five feet six inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, has blue eyes, a slight limp in the left leg.

Anyone having information concerning Anthony is asked to contact Clair A. Anthony, 1421 E. 14th St., Toledo, O.

Circumstantial Only.
On the complaint of a farmer, old Ephraim had been haled into court charged with chicken shooting. His lawyer had made a fairly good case for him and for a clincher had called a plaintiff recalled, hoping to make him contradict his own testimony.

Hiked to Convention.
Two hikers, Jesse I. Heiser, from the Henry L. Schindler post of Philadelphia, and Anthony Brown, Cincinnati Legionnaire, arrived safely in New Orleans for the national convention. Heiser left Philadelphia May 12 and arrived in New Orleans September 18, having followed the Jefferson highway most of the distance. Brown left Cincinnati July 30 and arrived in New Orleans September 22, having passed through six states and 90 towns. No railroad transportation was used by either boy.

SQUARE DEAL, THEIR SLOGAN

Commander and Buddee of Portland, Oregon, Post No. 1, Insist on Fair Treatment of Men.

"We ask no favors, only the square deal," James J. Crossley, former major in the World War, and commander of Portland, Oregon, Post No. 1, Portland, O. reg., declares the foregoing to be the only platform on which he and his buddies have been charged, to their honor—and they've not been few—in behalf of former service men who came back to set their feet once more in the path of duty. Some of them bewildered by the confusing confusion of the war, some of them weary of the long years from their lives in the matter of competing successfully in their work or profession. Mr. Crossley has signed and was charged, to persuade the two former service men to withdraw, and seeking to use political influence gained through a considerable city party to aid him. Crossley immediately took the matter up for his post. He carried the fight straight to the major and commissioners. And the appointment went to the highest competitor—a former service man.

"We have been unusually fortunate in Portland," the commander is quoted as saying, "in placing our buddies in the highest of trusts they are capable of filling. Our municipal judge, the superintendent of the health department and the chief clerk of the post bureau, saw service in the World War. I believe one of the greatest duties of the American Legion is to fight for the interests of our boys. You don't realize just how important it is to have our boys wherever it is necessary. The American public wants to see its former soldiers receive justice. The Legion is the representative as well as the veterans."

PRAYS FOR BOYS' RETURN
Gray-Haired Mother of Leo Crete, Fisherville, Mass., Seeks Help of American Legion.
There's a mother in Fisherville, Mass., who says she has only one hope, one joy in life left to live for—and that's to see her boy home again. Her boy has not written to her, nor has she heard from him for more than two years. And daily she prays she will see the American Legion national headquarters, that Leo Crete, turned to her.

"Now I am writing you, with a mother's prayer, to try and find the boy," the mother, Mrs. Wilfred Crete, Providence Road, Fisherville, says, in her letter. "I have prayed and prayed for the last two years, and I've been wearying and worrying over him, and now I am a gray-haired mother, longing for my boy. My heart is filled with anguish. Will you see him and take him home to me?"
The accompanying picture of Leo was taken when he was overseas, with the Army of Occupation in Germany. His mother describes him as being five feet five and one-half inches tall; weight 140 pounds. He is dark-complexioned and has dark, wavy eyes. The mother heard from him last at Connetquot, O., where after he had started home from Salt Lake City, Utah, he wrote he was going to work on the Great Lakes boats. Leo enlisted in the regular army when fifteen years old and, after serving in France, returned to the United States and re-enlisted, serving one year.

War Scholarships up 278%.
War scholarships amounting to $500,000 have been given 2,798 young Methodist former service men through the board of home missions. The remains of a fourteenth century stained-glass window have been discovered at Chelsea (Hagland) Old Church. The old glass, which is of immense value, was found between layers of soft plaster behind a mass of old bricks. In one window only a fragment of a border was found, but in the other a panel two feet by two feet was brought to light. The panel is nearly complete, the head of the figure—apparently that of St. Lawrence of St. Stephen is missing. The glass seems to be of a date not later than the middle of the fourteenth century. With the exception of Westminster abbey, there is no London church with its own glass of so early a date.

Legion Men Everywhere.
The world seems very small or the American Legion is everywhere. The American Legion Post No. 1, Portland, Oregon, Post No. 1, Portland, Oregon, reg., has received from Mrs. Gray Townsend of American Legion Auxiliary, national commander of the department of the Memorial, American Legion, at the memorial services at Mammoth Cave.

Decorated for Emery.
John G. Emery, Battle Creek, Mich., past national commander of the American Legion, was recently decorated with the order of the Knight-Commander of the Legion of Italy by the royal Italian consular agent in Indianapolis. The honor was conferred by direction of the king of Italy in recognition of Mr. Emery's services as national commander of the Legion to the Italian organization of former service men, the United Nations, des Combatants et Mutiles Italiens.

IF TRUTH WERE INSISTED ON
Some of the Remarks That Would Be Made About That Proudly Displayed Photograph.

"This isn't a very good picture of our Haley. You don't usually see a whitehead like that." "Why, how do you flatter your eye? A person might be led to think you're really going to judge from this." "If you had held that pose much longer you'd have had a nervous breakdown. That photographer should have known better." "The man who took this picture ought to build up a heavy business. He certainly knows how to make any disappear, doesn't he?" "Why do you always have your last word taken in profile? You've got a very ordinary nose, to say the least." "Too bad you don't smile like this otherwise."

Rare Find in English Church.
After three centuries of concealment behind plaster and rubbish, the remains of a fourteenth century stained-glass window have been discovered at Chelsea (Hagland) Old Church. The old glass, which is of immense value, was found between layers of soft plaster behind a mass of old bricks. In one window only a fragment of a border was found, but in the other a panel two feet by two feet was brought to light. Religious Exercise.
Two shiploads of sailors were on a desert island. They were utterly miserable, pined with hunger and cold. The one more wretched than the other said to his companion: "Can you pray, Bill?" "No." "Can you sing a hymn?" "No." "Well," said the first, "let's have something religious; let's have a collection."—Boston Transcript.

"Helpful gymnastics, or stupid, silly games, played halfheartedly, have little place in the proper physical development of the growing child," declares Dr. Blanche Sterling, acting assistant surgeon, United States public health service, in commenting on the health of school children. In planning exercise with a view to the promotion of good posture, she suggests they should be simple and vigorous and full of energy and vim.

The posture of school children cannot, however, be said to depend chiefly on the condition of the neck and the feet. The story is told of a banker who suffered the loss of one eye and had a glass substitute made. The glass eye was wonderfully fashioned, so much so that the wearer was satisfied no one could tell it from a real organ. A day or so after he began wearing it a customer of the bank sought a loan, but the banker was not quite satisfied with the collateral. After much persuasion from the would-be borrower the banker said: "I will make you a sporting proposition. If you can tell which of my eyes is glass, I will make you the loan."

"That's easy," replied the other. "It's your left eye."
"How do you know?" asked the banker.
"It is the more sympathetic of the two," responded the borrower.—Wall Street Journal.

Do Dreams Come True?
A southern Indiana man a few evenings ago went into a drug store in his town and bought a quart of red whisky. "The kind we used to get," being fortunate in getting one of two quarts the druggist had. The latter asserted he was going to keep the second quart for his own use.

The buyer stole away from the drug store with his package, mentally debating whether he should share his portion with people. After several moments of anxiety he came to his decision. No one but himself should ever taste a quart of red whisky again. Then the buyer cried and he woke up.—Indianapolis News.

At Last.
"He was always waiting—doing anything finally, turn up for him?"
"Oh, yes—his toes did."

Are you among these thousands?

THOUSANDS of people keep on trying, year after year, to build health from food that has been robbed of certain elements required for perfect nutrition.

If your food doesn't contain the mineral properties that go to build up nerve, tooth and bone structure, there is no other means by which you can get these vital elements.

This is one reason why so many well-informed people eat Grape-Nuts today, and give the family a help to health.
