THEATRES

At the Garrick, Detroit

"Spice of 1922," the big musical revue which scored such a record-breaking summer success at the New York Winter Garden, will be the attraction at the Garrick Theatre the week beginning November 19. This dazzling spectacle of mirth and melody is in two acts and thirty scenes, and is sponsored by Arman Kaliz. Jack Lait is the author, and Allan K. Foster did the staging. It is one of the largest productions on tour this season, and travels via a seven-car special train.

Vaieska Suratt heads the all-star cast, with Midgie Miller also featured. Other principals include George, Bobbe and Eddie Nelson, Flora Hoffman, Florence Browne, Nitza Verville, Jack Trainor, Gattison Jones, Wilbert Dunn, Beatrice Squire, James Gaylor, Evelyn Downing, Virginia Napier, Maris Chaney, Evelyn Gerald, Sybil Stuart, Simone Jacquet and Arman Kaliz.

The most alluring feature of "Spice of 1922" is the famous Garden of Eden chorus of fifty beautiful girls, many of them recruited from the ranks of Greenwich Village artist models. Every type of beauty is represented, with the vogue running to bobbed-hair blondes and Titians. The girls present a startling novelty in a Javenese temple scene, clad in costumes of imported gold and silver paint. In a blue and white Dutch porcelain finale they offer a picturesque wooden shoe dance.

At the I. O. O. F. Temple

Showing at the I. O. O. F. Temple Saturday, November 18, the film, "The Great Moment," will be the feature attraction. It is said to be a play well worth seeing, one with a good plot and a snappy climax. A Mack Sennett comedy will also be shown.

Next Wednesday, Nov. 22, "The Bride's Play" will be shown for the approval of the devotees of the silver screen. As an added attraction a magazine film will be shown.

The management of the I. O. O. F. temple announces that hereafter music will be furnished at all shows.

As Crude Petroleum
one of this country's greatest sources of power has been drawn from the earth.
Our descriptive folder this month shows that the refined forms of petroleum are almost as many as its uses are varied.
In fact, it's much like the business of banking. One man uses it one way, one another. Each finds in the strong, basic banking organization the form of service that best meets his particular needs.
Our constant endeavor is to so conduct this Institution that it shall serve most effectively the greatest number of people in this section.
