Thanksgiving Come Early.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN. THE Armistice Day Thanksgiving! The one day of mortal combat, the day of judgment, memories, the other with its peace that "peace hath its victories more numerous than those of war." We may not know just yet how to celebrate November 11, because of its newness as a day of national holiday.

Popular opinion insists upon fixing the date of Thanksgiving day in 1923 when the Pilgrims celebrated the gathering of their first harvest. They certainly had a large feast; it lasted five days, and they anticipated high merriment at least five days. The first Thanksgiving day observed in all the states was on October 18, 1777; it was recommended by proclamation of the Continental congress after the surrender of Burgoyne. For 11 years there was after congress recommended a day of fasting and prayer for national thanksgiving and supplication, and the President's proclamation named Thursday, November 23, of that year. The anti-Federalists made such a rumpus about it that it was not repeated until 1795, when President Washington, without recommendation by congress, set February 19 as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer and the President's proclamation named Thursday, November 23, of that year.

That was the end of an official national Thanksgiving day for nearly half a century. It was revived by President Lincoln when he appointed a special day of thanksgiving for the victory at Gettysburg, August 28, 1863. In the meantime the American people had been celebrating Thanksgiving day pretty much all over the country, with the most fervent and patriotic and patriotic devotion. The American knows a good thing when he sees it. President Lincoln believed in the value of Thanksgiving with his Gettysburg proclamation to nationalize the November Thanksgiving day. So for 90 years or so Thanksgiving has been a national holiday and demoralized as a patriotic day.

Theoretically of course, we should be planning to attend church in the morning, to give thanks to God for the mercies and blessings of the year to us both as individuals and as citizens of the great United States, and most fortunate nation on earth. Individually, as compared with the peoples of other nations, we Americans are most of us

The NEW LEGION COMMANDER

Alvin Owsley, Texas Man, Chosen as National Commander—Anticipates No Harm From Sawyer.

The national convention of the American Legion has expressed itself as being in a favorable attitude toward Sawyer as head of the federal hospital board is commencing, and until I have had a personal conversation with President Hoover, I do not believe that he would do any World War veterans any harm."

This answer was made to queries by the new national commander of the American Legion, Alvin M. Owsley, as he passed through Indianapolis, national headquarters, on his way to New York to assume his duties as national commander in New Orleans. Mr. Owsley had spent a day with his parents in Florida, five days after the Legion convention in New Orleans. "It's the sort of a place where if a citizen shoots up his nose and puts on a clean collar it is suspected of interdicting along with some other citizen's wife."—Kansas City Star.

Miss Blanche Holden. Indianapolis, Ind.—"When my daughter was only ten years of age she contracted a severe cold which came near resulting in her death. But I quit all other medicine and fell back on the medicine that saved me several years ago, namely, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with the Golden Medical Discovery, and before the fourth bottle was gone she was well. From that time I have been recommending these two medicines."—Mrs. Mary Holden, 48 South State Ave.
