HOME TALENT CARNIVAL WINS

Legion Post of Vicksburg, Miss., Raises More Than $5,000 for Home for Organization.

More than $5,000 was obtained by Allen Post No. 3 of the American Legion at Vicksburg, Miss., by a carnival put on by home talent recently, assuring the post of a Legion home in Vicksburg.

All of the shows and booths were built by Legionnaires with the exception of those sponsored by the Rotary, Kiwanis and Knights of Columbus, which organizations built their own ducking tank, show and dance platform, respectively. Every organization in the city was asked to conduct a booth or show of some kind, using its own emblem or insignia and name, paying its expenses out of the money taken in and turning the profits over to Allen post.

LEGION IS MORE EFFICIENT

Lemuel Bolles, National Adjutant of Organization, Points to Enthusiasm Throughout Northwest.

Swinging from Indianapolis through Minnesota to Washington on the Pacific coast in the northwest, a week back through California, Colorado and Kansas, adjutant Bolles, at the convention of the American Legion in each of the five states, has returned to headquarters with three outstanding impressions, as the result of his trip. These he catalogued as first, a distinct improvement in the determination of American citizen found in each state, and third, general enthusiasm toward educational work and community service, which, of course, includes the proper care of disabled veterans.

"The crowds looked the same," he said. "The men acted the same. There is a distinct type these Legionnaires. They look one in the eye. They are keen and outspoken, self-confident. They constitute the ideal type of an American citizen."

In speaking of the improvement in delegations to the state conventions, he was taken to explain that subjects were more clearly defined than in the past, the committees stepped forward with their work in more confidence, the machinery ran smoother, and although capable of independent action, they were more united.

"An illustration was given: 'In two states factional fights had been waged,' the national adjutant said. 'They threatened to split the departments, but those fights never got to the floor of the convention. Leaders made concessions, all for the general welfare and progress of the legion.'

"The spirit of the elections was not the least feature today in the states, and this keynote was struck in each of the five conventions."

"There is no question but what the Legion is more efficient today in California, Washington, Colorado, Colorado and Kansas than it was a year ago," he said.

Paying a tribute to the Kansas department, Bolles said that the American Legion there taking a keen interest in the boys of the state industrial school, acting as guardians and big brothers.

"It was impressive to find that the Legion in California, Colorado, Colorado and Kansas than it was a year ago," he said.

FUR USED IN MANY WAYS; USEFUL AFTERNOON GOWNS

FASHION is lavish, not to say reckless, in the use of furs this season. One wonders where all the skins come from, but there always seems to be enough to meet the demand that is pouring in from every department of woman's apparel. The supply is also the affair of the furrier, who always seems to have something up his sleeve and produces pelts as a magician takes drops of rabbits out of a hat. Fur garments begin with the choicest and scarf and progress through the wide scarf and short coat to long will serve for many evening affairs as well as for daytime wear. Nearly all fashionable fabrics are supple and have wonderful draping qualities. This allows designers to preserve simplicity of line in the silhouette while they indulge in endlessly novel draperies.

Something new and interesting in afternoon gowns is shown at the left of the picture, in which narrow waist edging is featured. The model has a long, well-fitted bodice with round neck, and a full, straight skirt, with points at the hem line. Diamond shaped motifs, in silk and wool embroidery, emphasize this unusual treatment of the skirt at the front and a medallion of embroidery serves the same purpose on the bodice.

Odd underclothes of net and lace extend the three-quarter length bodice sleeves to the hands, and here bands of folded georgette are tied about the wrists and fall in short skirts.

Narrow bands of embroidery, draped sleeves and trailing sash ends of satin, bring the gown at the right up to the standard of dinner or matinee requirements. Minus the sash and sleeve draping it is a simple affair and it occurs to one that they might both be removable, and thus widen the field of usefulness for this handsome model. The simplest way in which to tone up a simple afternoon gown to make it serve for high occasion, is to make use of the rich brocaded ribbons or silk (some of them in metallic effects) that are made into long sashes. They are brought about the waist and simply knotted at one side or fastened with the wide and other gorgeous ornaments for the same use.

First Steam Transatlantic Trips. The American vessel Savannah crossed the Atlantic from Savannah, Ga., to Liverpool in 1819 in 29 days 11 hours. The trip was made partly under steam but mainly by sail. In 1833 the Royal William, of 330 tons, built in Canada, made the first transatlantic voyage entirely under steam.

BOTH SERVED THEIR COUNTRY

Mrs. Paul Akin of Indianapolis Also Answered Call When Husband Joined the Navy.

Back there in the fall of 1917, when the sadness of parting invaded thousands of hearts, Mrs. Paul Akin went home to dinner one night with the news that her husband had joined the navy.

"Well, dear, the time has come when I'm going to join up—the navy," she said.

And the two of them enlisted and left Indianapolis together. He took the oath of allegiance and were sworn in together. It was the only couple recorded so.

Mr. Akin went to the Navy department at Washington and was assigned to the office of naval intelligence, later being transferred to the bureau of navigation. She served her full time at home, back again in the role of housekeeper, she is active in the Woman's auxiliary of the American Legion.

NOW 82, AIDED IN TWO WARS

Oldest Member of Paris American Legion Post Auxiliary, Awarded Two Medals by Government.

Mrs. Emily C. Hollic scraped lint for the wounded soldiers of the Union army during the Civil War.

During the Civil War she worked for the French government for more than three years during the war.

During the World War she worked for the American Legion hospital at Neuilly, France.

She was eighty-two last April and in a recent letter to Mrs. Gilbert Jones, president of the Paris post auxiliary, she said it was a joy to have been associated with those noble American women.

Mr. Hollic was born in 1835 and was a member of the American Legion post at Philadelphia when ladies gave their shirts, taboretts and their own dresses which the lint was unvalued and rolled into tons of bandages.

Called for Disabled Veterans. Michigan Jonesives did their fruit and pickle/canning this year with thoughts of the disabled veterans of the World War—and, remembering the debt the public owes them—its mind. A portion of what they canned went to a collection of canned foods which will be sent to all the hospitals in the state this winter for the former-service patients. The movement for making the welcome donation was started by the American Legion auxiliary and met with generous response. 25,000 quarts being contributed.

FOULARDS

Foulard goods, particularly those of dull finished material, are extremely smart. Many of these achieve a form of trimming but the soft drapery, caught up at one side of the waist.

Wide Collars. Pleasures wide collars of white satin or white georgette, with wide hemstitching and sometimes embroidery, are featured on the new fall frocks, relieving the plain necklines to which we have grown accustomed.

A New Thing. If you always wear modish things a little bit before everyone else does, you want to copy the new fall in handkerchiefs. Of course, you will want to choose a tailored or outdoor
