American Individualism A Timely Message to the American People

By HERBERT HOOVER Secretary of Commerce. 2- PHILOSOPHIC GROUNDS

ON THE philosophic side we can agree at once that intelligence, character, courage, and the divine spark of the human soul are alone the property of individuals. These do not lie in agreements, organizations, in institutions, in masses, or in groups. They abide alone in the individual mind and heart.

The inherited instincts of self-preservation, self-defense, self-expression, for power, for self-interest, for the good of the family, for the good of the community, for the good of the nation, for the good of the world, are not the property of individuals. They are the property of the human race.

From the instincts of self-preservation, self-defense, self-expression, for power, for self-interest, for the good of the family, for the good of the community, for the good of the nation, for the good of the world, are not the property of individuals. They are the property of the human race.

Further, the maintenance of individualism is the maintenance of the things of the spirit which depend upon the ever-renewed supply from the mass of those who can rise to leadership. Our social and industrial progress is almost solely dependent upon the creative minds of those individuals with imaginative and administrative talents.

Leadership is a quality of the individual. It is the individual who can function in the world of industry, in the world of commerce, in the world of politics, in the world of religion, in the world of art, in the world of science, in the world of letters, in the world of letters, in the world of letters.
