Motorist Simply Must Talk Roads

Every motorist loves to tell about road conditions he has met and commented at the wheel. The recovery of the invalid may depend upon your choice of a

At home the millionaire's road locomotive, and the workman's flivver don't even exchange toots as they go by. But let them meet somewhere on the open road and they are more likely than not to stop while their owners converse, fluently and with emphasis about roads.

Without reasoning why, this trait exists, but recognizing it as an absolute, and basic principle, the Detroit Automobile Club has deliberately encouraged it, and has founded upon it a complete plan of road information throughout a continent.
