"If I Were President"—Ford

An Authorized Interview With Henry Ford

(In an effort to give its readers the most authentic and timely information concerning such matters as the following: the country's economy, the following special permission by wire from the Managing Editor of the Collier magazine to reprint in full this amazing interview with Henry Ford. This article, which appeared in the August 4 issue of Collier's, is reprinted as the largest item of recent date in this newspaper's magazine world, as it probably is the most comprehensive interview ever secured with Ford concerning a subject that is important in the minds of the nation today.—Editor's Note.)

Henry Ford: "There are approximately 110,000,000 people in the United States. I informed Henry Ford, 'and $1,000,000,000 of them want to know what you are going to do about the present situation.' 'Stick around for a few days and I will tell you,' was his amazing answer. 'Do you mean it?' I asked. 'That is what I had gone to Detroit for to get, but I didn't expect it to fall on my knees, like this.' 'Certainly, I mean it,' he said. 'You caught me at just the right time. That is the very question I've been thinking about.'"
