Sec. Edwin Denby Writes An Exclusive Article For Eccentric-"Our Country"

DISCUSSES IN INTERVIEW THE PRESENT ATTITUDE OF JAPANESE AND ENGLISH TOWARD THE UNITED STATES

EDWIN DENBY

With the express purpose of securing for the Eccentric not only an interview with Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby, but an exclusive article for this paper written by him, the editor went to Mr. Denby's summer home at Clintonville last Saturday, where the Secretary has been staying since the latter part of July. Mr. Denby's home is a large, but unpretentions, white frame dwell; ling, situated but a few feet from the shore of Lake Oakinad.

Mrs. Denby, an excellent type of American womanfood, came to the plane. She would sat Mr. Denby it he could come down. The large living room was simply but tastily furnished and on a little table beside the door stood a row of books, among which were "Peck's Bad Boy'," "T. Tembaron," "Undertow," "The Wickeed Marquuis" and "The Last Voyage of the Donna Isabelle."

In a few moments Mr. Denby, who had been working in his room upstairs, appeared. He is a man of have proportions, and an inquisitive living l With the express purpose of secur-

The spirit of American demonstry was well illustrated this month when the great tragedy leftl our people. Theoritically the office of President is varieties of the president of the quickly as then by the death that must come to us all other than the president of the treatment of the quickly as the news could be communicated the father of the quickly as the news could be communicated the father of the desired on the president of the United States carried on. The manches of Government went on without accident or jar. The Manches of Government went on without accident or jar. The Manches of Government went on without accident or jar. The manches of Government went on without accided, accepted without question and with full confidence Coolidge, carnest, able and strong as the rocks of his native state.

Then came the Majestic funeral, stately in its utter simplicity. Not in exaggerated display but in emotion deep felt and simply expressed the people showed their love for their fallen leader in the long journey fryin coast to coast. A myriad of men, women and children with bared heads, standing must by the wayside night and day, were his mourmers.

Then came the last rites of burial. The simple service was conducted from the home of his father, a small white frame house in the town of Marion, Ohio. How like our country as we love to think of it, were these two historic scenes: the funeral of President Harding and the inauguration of President Coolidge. A frame house and an old father in white of the president of the magistrate said the few words that cast upon his shoulders the awful burden of the president Office.

The picture will forever illumine the page of our history. It depicts the spirit of the Republic. We who have seen these things must read
