Matrimonial Adventures... ursuit... by Henry Sydnor Harrison

A FEW WORDS ABOUT HENRY SYDNOR HARRISON... It is like shaking hands with an old friend to see the name of Henry Sydnor Harrison.

It was the evening of Mat Herketh's picnic supper, small but memorable; and now the clocks had there been any on the island, would have noted close to midnight.

"You-you looked like—" he began a little confidentially; and then, breaking off, he cleared his throat and started again, with authority: "I don't say I approve of that suit, but—but it does seem to fit in with the business of the day."

"What do you say to that?" he asked, leaning back in his chair. "I don't say I approve of that suit, but—but it does seem to fit in with the business of the day."
