Resigns as Manager
 Harry Goldsmith, of Bird avenue, who, for the past year has been associated with the Birmingham Telephone Company as manager of Eco City, has resigned his position with that company and gone with the James G. Pierce Corporation, which has the subdivisions adjoining Eco on the South. However, Mr. Goldsmith is completing his new home on Bird avenue and will continue to make his home there.

Bazaar is Success
 The bazaar and supper at the Burnsville Avenue Congregational Church last night was a great success. The supper, with the same menu as the harvest supper at the church, drew a crowd which kept the waitresses busy during the entire supper period. The articles in the bazaar were all handsome and desirable, and the booths were sold out before closing time, thereby clearing a substantial amount.

"Digging Party"
 An unusual form of entertainment was staged last Wednesday evening when fifteen of Eco's population met for a Digging Party. The party took place in what was some time the basement of the Burnsville Avenue Congregational Church. At the arrival, the guests were offered with pies or apples and allotted a corner.

After several hours of diligent labor, every delicious lunch of coffee, doughnuts, and fruit was served by a committee composed of Mrs. James Fisher, Mrs. Potts, and Mrs. Campbell.

Mr. and Mrs. Brian Bell and Mrs. Roy Dell, of Ruffner avenue, returned Sunday after spending the week with Mrs. Dell's mother, Mrs. Nelson, of Hart-Horne.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Monroe are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Marie Harthe, born November 19. The young lady is doing nicely and is the pride of Ruffner. Mrs. Fred Stebler, of Lockwood Boulevard, Royal Oak, was hostess at a family reunion over Thanksgiving and around her guests were Mrs. Rowena Goldsmith and family, of Bird avenue.

Little Miss Shirley Dell, ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Dell, on Ruffner avenue, has been out of school for the past week on account of illness.

Messrs. Frank and Tony Hines are rushing the work of their new homes on Smith avenue so that they may have their families in before very cold weather.

E. M. Bowber, who makes his home with his brother, James Filby, on Emmons avenue, returned the middle of the week from Grand Rapids with a party of four from St. Claire. Mr. Bowber was accompanied home by a deer weighing 1165 pounds, which it seems, came in contact with a bullet from his gun. The Filby family have been celebrating with a week of venison dinners.

Harry Goldsmith, of Bird avenue, has just returned from a hunting trip on the "Creek and will leave for his winter home in Iowa. It is rumored that Mr. Goldsmith will have his hunting outfit for company on the later trip also.

Spine and Lungs of Boy Affected By Tuberculosis

TOMMY TAKES A SUN BATH

"Back to nature" is Tommy's slogan as he sits in the open air at the State Taperdown sanatorium at Howell. He is taking the sun to tuberculosis of the spine and lungs.

Tommy has been tuberculosis. His head is sunken, his eyes are bloodshot and his twisted body is crooked for all time. But Tommy is a plucky little fellow. As he sits in the sunlight with his companions, these are many children, at the sanatorium in an almost similar condition he comes first into the sun and then into the future, not knowing whether either or both have any promise for him.

How the Seals Help.

Forty-two million Christmas seals are now on sale in the state of Michigan. Every seal that is sold is a blow against the disease that has injured Tommy for life and that killed 2,654 Michigan people last year.

Everyone cannot take an active part in the fight against the "Great White Plague," but everyone can buy seals.

Christmas seals fight tuberculosis. Buy them. Give Health.

SHADE TREE TRANSPLANTING

By Ralph I. Coryell.
 The operation of transplanting presupposes a certain shock to the plant to be moved. In theory it is possible to transplant without any shock but in practise this can only be an approximation. The nearest approach to a transplanting without shock may be said to be the planting of potted plants. In this case very little or none of the small roots are harmed and the plant continues its growth without a check.

In the case of trees, shrubs, and evergreens, however, it is not practicable to transplant without losing some of the extensive root system of the plant. When it is understood that even a comparatively small tree may have roots ten to twelve feet long it is apparent that it would be very difficult, if not arduous, to transplant the entire root system. In the case of full grown trees it must be remembered that the root system extends farther than the top.

and a root system diameter of fifty to sixty feet is not uncommon in a full grown tree. It is necessary to keep this fact in mind when one hears so often about a tree being transplanted with all the roots.

Upon digging a grove of trees there will be found a great diversity in their several root systems. Some trees will exhibit a compact mass of fibrous roots while other root systems will consist mainly of attenuated "prongs" with a few fibers on the extremities. This variation may be accounted for partially by the individual habits of growth of different trees, by the soil and moisture content of the trees, or by the previous care of the trees.

It is to be noted that a tree which has been transplanted one or more will usually be found to contain a more compact root system than one which is dug from a grove. This is due to the fact that a tree which has been transplanted one or more will usually be found to contain a more compact root system than one which is dug from a grove.

The feeding roots of a tree are the root system of the tree and it is found often that they are dug in it from often they will be found to contain a more compact root system than one which is dug from a grove.

These with many open tops, the feeding roots of a tree are the root system of the tree and it is found often that they are dug in it from often they will be found to contain a more compact root system than one which is dug from a grove.

In planting the tree a hole should be dug large enough to accommodate the roots without crowding. If the soil is of a poor quality the roots should be filled around with good soil. The soil should be tamped in well, especially under the crown of the tree. A slow stream of water from a hose tends to settle the earth as well as to keep the roots in a moist condition. Unless the earth maintains a good contact with the roots the latter are liable to drying out.

If the tree transplanted is especially tall it may be well to stake it, using a stout wire, and a pad around the trunk to keep the wire from chafing. The advantage of staking is that it prevents high winds from tipping the tree over and also eliminates the pulling action of the wind on the roots.

Fall planting or early spring planting are recommended for shade trees, as it is necessary to give the roots sufficient time to become established before the actual growth starts. In the next article will be treated the use of Shade Trees.

Your Question AND ITS ANSWER

QUESTION—"My wife has had indigestion with gas and heartburn, and obstinate constipation for years. Will your methods get her permanently well?"

ANSWER—Chiropractic offers a logical, safe and sufficient method for the correction of the cause of your wife's illness. An examination of her full transmission of vital energy over the middle dorsal nerves, feeding the stomach cannot do its work properly without this energy. Advise your wife that results under proper Spinal Adjustments, will be positive. Her symptoms of indigestion, bloating, heart-burn and constipation can be permanently eradicated. However, she must first submit to a thorough spinal examination to locate the real cause of her trouble. Then take Adjustments regularly. You will both be gratified with improvement noted.

Consultation and analysis is always free.
