I. O. F. Program Just before leaving New York for the twentieth time for Hollywood, Calif., Thomas Meighan attracted an immense crowd of admirers in that city while filming establishing shots in "A Prince Thru the Woods" which will be shown at the Grand Opera House, Saturday, Jan. 13...

Mr. Meighan rode down Fifth avenue in a limousine from the Plaza, while a cameraman on an automobile directly in front ground the camera. Then he was held up by traffic, as part of the picture, and made a slanting scene to show the annoyance of the practice he was practicing. In a minute a crowd of nearly a thousand people gathered around, and traffic was really blocked, as the shouts of the electric "Stop-and-go" signals, a comedy film "That Night," completes Saturday's bill.

Tom Mix, bright beacon of western drama, will be at the Grand Opera House, Wednesday, Jan. 17, in "Do and Dare," a stirring story of intrigue, lightning blood and a South American revolution.

Under the direction of Edward Sedgwick, the story by Marion Gresham has been vividly picturized and an excellent cast selected for the support.

The tale is that of a young, alert westerner who is suddenly gripped by the first of romances when he meets the hot-stove league yarn of the adventures of his bold and famous forebear, Kit Carson. Both the pioneer and scout of the great West.

Urged on by his emotions and aided by the dexterity of the scout, soon finds himself in an airplane carrying a military message to the leader of a revolution in the southern continent. What happens to him when he faces a firing squad and hears the most beautiful serenade east of the Andes affords many unusual incidents and absorbing scenes in this production.

As an added attraction the comedy, "Cupid Elephant," will be shown. Katherine Bromley of Bloomfield Hills, is recovering after an attack of scarlet fever.
