Is As Much Concerned In Village Welfare As Any Residents

What has so far been said in this series of articles on the importance of the home-town merchant applies with equal force to the farmer residing in the vicinity of Birmingham as it does to those who reside in the city.

Probably by far the greatest progress that has been made in the past 100 years has been achieved as a result of the division of industry.

SHORT INTERVIEWS WITH ECOITES

1. "Eco, if incorporated, will probably be improved, but the taxes will be so much higher and having moved away from Birmingham on just that account, I'm not in favor of incorporation."

2. "Birmingham itself is not very progressive, and therefore we do not expect to see Eco if we incorporate. We will probably have just as many improvements as we get in Birmingham, and the taxes will be no so high."

3. "If Eco and Birmingham incorporate, our taxes will be raised a great deal. I feel as do many others, that although it is to the advantage of Birmingham, we could better use the extra tax amount for improvement of Birmingham, and remain unincorporated."

4. "Birmingham's attitude seems to be that of granting a favor to Eco, but we are not a corporation with Eco. But we understand, as Birmingham has admitted, that Birmingham is not a corporation with Eco. With this view of the matter in mind, I am not in favor of incorporation."

Baldwin High Professor Writes On Astronomy

(Article by W. S. Toothacker, B.P.A.)

The ground has been scientifically organized and accepted, as a face value. Today, however, astronomy has come into an unique epoch among civilized people, a linking between heaven and earth.

Today, the wise guidance of the stars we push out over tracts seas of desert wastes to traverse the vast expanses of the air. By their clocks and watches are regulated and the boundaries of nations and individual land grants on the earth are determined.

Primitive man, too, believed that all creation had life and a will to do good or evil and this afforded a foundation for the myths and legends of the early days.

Tourists Bemoan Lack of Camp Site

Three cars of tourists passing through the Village a few days ago, one from Cleveland, one from Kansas and one from Akron, Ohio, were very much put out and disgusted with Birmingham because there was no picnic camping site for motorists.

They went so far, as to try bribing the farmers to allow them to spend the night, but Birmingham turned a deaf ear to all their pleas, and waved them away with "no trespassing" and "keep out" signs. They stopped at an Eco City store and relieved themselves of a portion of their wrath by delivering a forceful and vehement oration concerning the standards and general character of the people in and about Birmingham.

Are you a jay-walker? If you do come under this classification it would be advisable for you to keep away from the intersection of Maple and Woodward on Saturday and Sunday evenings, for the Village police department has threatened weird punishment for those who insist on walking over the lines.
