Never Was a Woman Born Who Was Satisfied With the Man She Married

By C. E. BYRNE, National Association of Music Merchants.

HERE never was a woman born who was satisfied with the man she married. She always makes him over, or, rather, she mistakes his gradual disintegration for something constructive in her own handlwork.

The universal husband! Pathetic, bedraggled scarecrow in trousers. No wonder men always answer their country's call to arms. It is far easier to face quick death on the battlefield than slow death beside the

At home they are helpless, numb. Things overtake them, fasten or As upone any are nepress, mann. langs overtake them, rascen on them while they are salesp. Whichever way, they go, it is not the way of their choice. They are pushed along from behind, never doing any of the things they desire, never wanting any of the things they desire, never wanting any of the things they get. Poor universal husband!

As the blare of frumpets and the swirl of smoke gradually die down As the blare of trumpets and the swiri of smoke gradually die down on the feminist battlefront, an unbiased by sees, still breathing, but spiritually dead, a pathetic, bedraggled sort of scarecrow in trousers—the universal husband: The universal husband is more still be promising little boys in the world, is warped and cheated by womes from the moment he expands his lungs at birth until he contracts them (often wilfully) at the moment of death.

Woman have very little honesty, no modesty and no sense of shame. They cannot afford such fairy-book luxuries. Real honesty, modesty and a sense of shame are not things with which to catch a husband. Maiden a sense of shame are not things with which to catch a husband. Maiden Indies invariably possess some of these abnormal qualities. That is why they remain maiden ladies.

"A woman cannot be frail, She is not frail. She is a tigress. She is not helpless. She can move mountains, and does if she is not always given her own way. If she were helpless the universal husband would know how to provide for her, how to place her in his relation to a struggle for existence. But the does not know where to place her. She turns up at unexpected moments, in unexpected places, and acts as a positive menace to his psychology and to his business carreer.

If Advertising Is Selling, Who Are the Greatest Advertisers Ever?

By JANE BURR, American-Born English Writer.

By JANE BURR, American-Born English Writer.

Advertising is selling. The art of selling is as old as the world itself. The first salesman was a woman. When Eve sold Adam the apple in the Garden of Eden she had the satisfaction of taking the first order—and we all know Adam paid a very high price for it.

You may not be aware that the first department store was conducted by Noah during the flood. In fact, some bistorians go so far as to claim it was the original Piggly Wiggly. However, it is only fair to Noah to state he never bucked the New York stock exchange.

If advertising is selling, who were the greatest advertisers that ever lived? Just consider these names: King Tut—he built a tomb in order to set on the frinn tage of every newspaner 3,000 evers flater; Cleopatra.

to get on the front page of every newspaper 3,000 years later; Cleopatra—she put the word "wamp" in the dictionary and helped to make the movies popular; P. T. Barnun, who said "the people want to be fooled"; Volstead, discoverer of the American Sahara; Bryan, press agent fooled"; Voistead, discoverer of the American Sanara; Bryan, press agent of grape juice's Bambine Ruth; the liongerum magnate; Henry Ford, inventor of perpetual motion, and Pocahontas, after whom so much of our soft coal has been named.

The reason they were so successful in winning the recognition of the public was because their advertising methods were right. They always ed one idea, and they emphasized it, as a chiropodist would say, with both feet.

Take George Washington, for example. He had a great slogan,

"First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen, and no president since his time has been able to earn a better one.

Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Canal, the South and the Cotton Boll Weevil

By JOSEPH O. THOMPSON, American Cotton Association

In Chicago some day will be tremendous terminal warehouses for the age of our cotton where it will be assembled for export by way of the storage or our cotton where it was no ease-mode in export years of Great Lakes-St. Lawrence skip candt. The boll weveil is destroying in one year enough wealth to build this canal three or four times, the estimated cost of which is $240,000,000

The South is tremendously interested in this project as there are

The South is tremendously interested in this project, as there are parts of the world which would be reached at a cheaper freight rate by this route than by any other, and our interest is that it will, afford another means of competition which is the life of the cutton as well as other trade.

There are 900,000,000 people in the world, some only partially clothed, who are depending upon the South to supply them. There is another group of 700,000,000, about 3 per, cent of whom are coming into civilization annually by the wearing of clothes.

Sounter Morgan said in his speech advocating the Isthmian canal.

critization annually by the wearing of clothes.

Senator Morgan said, in his speech, advocating the Isthmian canal, that one inch added to the shirt-tail of every Chingman would make it profitable to grow 20,000,000 tales of cotton. The field for cotton produce tion at a gootiable price is without limit. First of all we must get rid of the boll weevil.
