"The Masquerade" at the Garrick All Next Week

Miss Bonstelle has selected for the fourth and last week offering at the Garrick, Detroit, "The Masquerade" with Minor Watson playing the dual role which so strongly furthered the popularity of Mr. Post. The story begins in a London fog, with the meeting between John Chiloote and John Loder. The distinct resemblance between the two is recognized by John Chiloote, who has fallen a victim to dope. He persuades John Loder, at a little later date, to impersonate him and dramatic license makes it possible for Loder to represent Chiloote, not only in his home but in the House of Parliament, where he makes a big impression and is considered one of the strong men. "The Masquerade" is a play of big surprises, setting forth an unusual romance and in its scenes shifts from the success of John Loder impersonating Chiloote, to the squalor and low estate to which Chiloote has fallen, ultimately showing his death, and his burial as John Loder. Kate Cecil Thurston provided a story of more than ordinary interest and in the dramatization John Loder and Chiloote provides one of the big men of the hour. However, the play is not political or with big dramatic moments and a romance of unusual quality. "The Masquerade" will afford Minor Watson his best opportunity in Detroit, and equally provides strong roles for the remainder of the Bonstelle personnel.

The usual Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees will be given, the first performance beginning next Monday night and closing the following Sunday.

"The Ne'er-Do-Well" at the Baldwin

Royal Oak, Next Week. Few persons have been privileged to look upon the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans at the same time. When Thomas Meighan's latest Paramount picture, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," is shown at the Baldwin Theatre next Sunday and Monday, the number will be greatly increased, for one of the acrobatic views of the Panama Canal featured in the picture gives a view of both oceans. During the filming of exterior scenes for Rex Beach's novel in Panama, Director Alfred E. Green sent William Miller, cameraman into the air to get certain scenes of the look for use in the picture. While at a high altitude, Mr. Miller was able to get a shot which gave a glimpse of both the Atlantic and Pacific. In making other air views for the picture, seven DeHaviland planes and two Martin bombers, all furnished by the U. S. Army in the Canal Zone, were piloted by Army fliers, were led. The Army officers who helped the Paramount company in making these scenes for "The Ne'er-Do-Well" were Major F. Walsh, Captain Smith, Captain Minter, Captain R. Quinn, Lieut. Leland Miller, Lieut. Moon, Lieut. Webster and Lieut. Fred Clark. All of these officers are stationed at Francis Field, Canal Zone.

In "The Ne'er-Do-Well" Mr. Meighan is seen as the shiftless son of a man of wealth who is disowned by his father after a certain escapade in New York which results in the young man being shanghaied on board a steamship bound for Panama, where he is left penniless and thrown upon his own meagre resources. Here he meets Chiquita, a beautiful Spanish girl, played by Lila Lee, and their love romance is not only prolific of highly dramatic developments, but ends in the regeneration of the young American ne'er-do-well. The supporting company is excellent. A rough and tumble fight of two lads, resulting in one of the bloodiest fends ever waged in the Cumberland Mountains of Kentucky, is a feature of Mary Miles Minter's latest Paramount picture, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which comes to the Baldwin Theatre next Thursday and Friday. The fathers of the boy fighters appear on the scene and separate the lads with some difficulty. Then the better halves of both families arrive.

The fathers start a warm argument over the cause of the boys' fighting, and the mothers begin to take up the quarrel. What ensues constitutes one of the most thrilling photo dramas of the current season. Antonio Moreno, featured as a leading man, and Ernest Torrence head an unusually fine supporting cast of players. Dustin Farnum in "Oath Bound" at I. O. F. Temple. Dustin Farnum, the well known portrayer of Western roles, will be seen in something different when the film "Oath Bound" is presented at the I. O. F. Temple Saturday evening, June 2. The story, written by Edna J. LeSain, is said to be a thrilling tale of river pirates on the Pacific coast. The scenes are laid along the river front at Santa Barbara. The central figures are a millionaire shipowner, his brother, who falls into the hands of crooks, and the millionaire's wife. Around this trio develop a story of crime, courage, cowardice and capidity which should afford fine opportunities to an actor of Dustin Farnum's ability. The star's leading woman is Ethel Gray Terry. Kid McCoy, ex-prizefighter, and Lefty Flynn, the former Yale football star, are also in the cast.

Co-Operation

Co-operation means MUTUAL HELP. It always results in benefit. It constitutes a power for good; it means profit and accomplishment. The welfare and growth of Birmingham depends upon co-operation. The merchants of Birmingham have established themselves and invested their money here and constitute a powerful factor for the growth and betterment of the town. But they need your co-operation, expressed in patronage. When you don't or spend your money outside Birmingham it cannot be spent by the merchants to help build the community. When You Spend Your Money Here You Co-operate — We All Benefit
