CHAPTER VIII

Questions.

Eaton, leaning against the rail... side her and glancing at her... her lashes were wet and his eyes...

"Yes, Donald—Mr. Avery, you know—and the conductor have been working on it all day. They have been questioning the porter."

"The bell from Father's berth... I thought you knew. It rang some time before. Father was found some five minutes before the porter had turned down the light."

"You found nothing to do with it; but the bell rang you know." "The bell from Father's berth, I thought you knew. It rang some time before. Father was found some five minutes before the porter had turned down the light."

"You found him then that way, the way he was?" "How?" "How?" Eaton repeated.

"Yes, low, Mr. Eaton or Hilliard or whatever your name is? How did you find him?" "I saw his hand in the aisle."

"When I came back it didn't look right to me; his position had not been right to me before. I stepped and looked it, and I found that it was all right."

"And having looked in and seen Mr. Santonio injured and lying as he was, you don't see me as having not put him right on my moral bearings, across him and pushed the bell and went on quietly out of the car before he could say a word?"

"Yes; but I wanted on the platform of the next car to see that both did come and the conductor passed me. I know that you are a man of nerve, and I am sure you did not."

"Do you expect us to believe that very peculiar action of yours was the act of an innocent man?" "If I had been a fly of the attack on Mr. Santonio, I'd not have stopped out of my berth at all."

"If you are innocent, then, of course, some line of action as you did. Will you explain what it was?" "I can't explain it, but I can't explain it."

"Step in here, Sir, He Directed." Donald Avery had come upon the platform and was standing beside Connor. Connor. There was no one else on the platform.

"Will you tell me, Mr. Eaton or whatever else your name may be, what it is that you have been asking Miss Santonio?" Avery demanded harshly. "Harry, what has this man been asking me about?"

"Mr. Eaton?" Her gaze went toward Eaton from Avery to Eaton and back again. "Why—why, Don? He has only been asking me what you had found out about the attack on Father?"

"I did not read the telegram to you?" Eaton asked. "It was meant for him he ought to be able to read it?" "No, he didn't. Will you?" Eaton halted while he recalled the exact wording of the message. "No," he replied, "I do not deny."

"I don't deny," he replied. "I don't deny," he replied. "I don't deny," he replied. "I don't deny," he replied.

as your railroad ticket seemed to show?" "Yes," Yokohama. "The last port we stopped at before sailing for Seattle was Yokohama."

Connelly repeated. "You had been in Seattle, then, at least five days; or the last steamer you could have come on about five days before the Tamba Maru. In fact, Mr. Eaton, you had been on this side of the water for nearly as many as eleven days, had you not?"

"Eleven days?" Eaton repeated. "Yes; for it was just eleven days before this train left Seattle that you came to the house of Mr. Gabriel Warren and waited there for him till he was brought home dead?"

Eaton, sitting forward a little, looked up at the conductor; his glance toward Avery's an answer he gazed then to Harriet Santonio. "At the charge," she had started; but Eaton, before she could speak, had agreed upon by Connor and Avery between them; suggestion of it had not come from the stantonian, and Avery had made the charge without being certain of it; he was watching the effect. Eaton now realized, to see if what he had accused was correct.

"Is that what Mr. Connor demanded?" "No, do you want to deny that too and have me prove you guilty?" "Again for a moment Eaton sat silent. "No," he decided. "I do not deny."

"Then you are the man who was at Warren's the night he was murdered?" "Yes," said Eaton. "I was there that evening. It was the one who had been there by appointment and waited till after Mr. Warren was brought home."

"So you admit that?" Connor asked; but he could not keep from Eaton. "Yes," said Eaton. "I was there that evening. It was the one who had been there by appointment and waited till after Mr. Warren was brought home."

"I don't deny," he replied. "I don't deny," he replied. "I don't deny," he replied. "I don't deny," he replied.

USING FILM IN THE CHURCH... If there is any doubt over the question of the use of the modern motion picture in the church by the minister, it would be a debate over the way in which the material is used. It is a very tricky thing to say that "a good thing can be badly done."

There is all the difference in the world between a noisy, irrelevant audience, coming into the building chattering, laughing, whispering, and an audience that is quiet and attentive to the same subject. Miss Gray has had this party, or some of them, are thrown upon the screen are adapted to the story itself, as near as possible, and they are using in a recent and to a desirable manner, and add greatly to the interest of the service. There is nothing religious in holding to a method which puts the preacher in front of empty seats.

Rather strange, it seems, that the road master's years ago by the famous "Cherry" people are belonging to New York Central railway, in its great run between New York and Buffalo, has never since been equaled. And now this fine railroad horse is to be equipped with a new engine and to be known as "Charles" Hogan, the engineer, was responsible, at one stretch the speed of 112 miles an hour being attained. It has been a long career with locomotive No. 105, but it has been a very successful one. It has been a long career with locomotive No. 105, but it has been a very successful one.

It will come as a surprise to many to learn, on the authority of the noted Arctic explorer, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, that the people are much interested in places where there are colder winters than those experienced at the North pole. For example, the lowest temperature at the pole, he says, is about 90 degrees below zero, but the lowest temperature at the North pole, he says, is about 90 degrees below zero.

FOR OVER 40 YEARS... HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE has been used successfully in the treatment of all cases of Catarrh of the Bladder, Prostate Gland, etc. It is a purely vegetable preparation, and is safe for all ages.

MOVIES THAT REALLY ARE SAFE... A movie picture show in the home, by the aid of a machine which has more to do with lights or inflammable things than a typewriter or a sewing machine, is an accomplished fact. The moviegoer, the invention of an Englishman, throws pictures up to its marvelous mirror simply by means of ordinary daylight or the artificial light used to illuminate the room.

HAIR STAYS COMBED, GLOSSY... "Hair Groom" Keeps Hair Combed—Well-Groomed. Millions Use It—Fine for Hair—Not Itchy, Greasy or Smelly.

HAIR GROOM... A woman's dress in Japan was adapted foreign dress "that was cheaper and simpler." And life was being thinking that nothing was so cheap and simple as a kimono!

A trouble with a good many of our amateur psychoanalysts seems to be that they are neither psychic nor analytic. "Somehow a doctor never looks really as happy as he pretends to be when he tells you there is nothing in the world the matter with you."

An English baronet in Chicago says that American won the war. And when he is making a speech in Paris, who does he say won the war? "The United States!"

Fanned by a terrific northwest gale, the department store, Perkins' pool room, Zimmerman's barber shop and the Niagara Bakery, N. Niagara, Wis., seven miles from Iron Mountain, Tenn. loss is estimated at $100,000.

"You know no one in Chicago?" "No one," Eaton repeated. "And certainly no one there knows you, unless you follow your movements in relation to Mr. Santonio. That's a necessary assumption from the fact that you know no one in Seattle."

The conductor pulled a telegram from his pocket and handed it to Avery. "I have immediately having already read it, passed it on to Harriet Santonio. She took it, staring at it mechanically and vacantly; then suddenly she shifted and the paper slipped from her hand and fluttered to the floor. Connor stooped and picked it up and handed it to Eaton. "This is yours," he said.
