Eco City News

"Off" Night for Men.
Last Friday night the men of Eco City were scheduled to be as usual at the Community House. For some unexplained reason only a few men turned out. After the remarks of the men who had been enthusiastically attending these meetings, such a lack of attendance was decidedly unusual. It is believed, however, that this was merely an "off" night and that the men who were interested in the same line show interest and enthusiasm when they attend the attendance of previous meetings.

At The Garrick.
H. B. Warner, ably supported by Lucile Watson and what has been frequently referred to by the critics as a "wonder cast," will appear at the Garrick Theatre for the week starting Sunday, November 18, in Philip Barry's Harvard Prize Play, "You and I."

It is a rollicking, sparkling comedy of modern American life but deft in bed and put out the light, telling of the things they would like Santa Claus to put in their stockings on Christmas eve. Eva was six years old and Boy had just had his eighth birthday. Eva wanted a lovely doll with long curls down its back and moving joints, while Boy wished for a bicycle more than anything, for as he said to Eva, "If I could only have one I could go for miles and miles out in the country and ride to school every day."

Soon the old Sandman was scattering his sleeping-sand about and in a little while they were both fast asleep. Rat-a-tat-tat! What could that strange noise be at the window? Boy sat up in bed and looked out and to his surprise saw jolly old Santa Claus standing out in the snow dressed up in furs. Boy did not know quite what to do for Santa Claus was calling him to the window and Boy thought, "Why it is a whole month before Christmas. Why is he here so soon?" He jumped out of bed and soon had Eva up and put her in one of his big fur lined pockets and Boy was soon tucked away to the other. He slipped out of the window and there before the astonished eyes of the children stood a wonderful sleigh drawn by six large reindeer with little silver bells all over their harness. Santa Claus cracked his great whip and they scampered faster than anything the children had ever seen move. Over treetops they flew, ever higher and toward.

"Here we are," said Santa, and with a "whoa there!" to the reindeer, they stopped outside a long low door and immediately it was opened building. He gave a loud call and by a little man so tiny that the children thought he must be a little boy, but he had long white whiskers reaching to his knees and was dressed in a scarlet suit with a tall green hat on his head shaped like a bell.

"Well my little man I have brought Eva and Boy home with me to get them their gifts for Christmas. Let's see all you have and let them take their choice."

Eva hung back, for she felt afraid of the little man, but she wanted to see Santa. Boy trotted right along with him and Eva seeing him followed. He wanted to see where all the toys were made to. He took them into a room and they were standing on all sorts of toys, dolls, drums, and everything to gladden the heart of a child.

"Gladden the heart of a child," said their little guide, "are all the toys for all children. You may go around and look at them all and take just what you would like. We must go on with our work because it must be finished by Christmas."

Both Eva and Boy soon forgot the little man for there was so much to see. Eva played with the dolls and a beautiful doll house, while Boy had tops, footballs and games. Suddenly he caught sight of a beautiful bicycle just what he wanted. How his heart pounded for joy! He got on it and rode around and round. Faster and faster he went, leaving the little man behind at their work, and rode away through the air, with the snow blowing cold through his thin night clothes. Now he was going at a greater speed than when he had that wonderful bicycle he had, when something happened. There was a great bump and he could feel himself falling, tumbling, tumbling through space, turning summersaults until he thought it was never going to end, and then right on through the roof, and plumb down upon his bed with the bicycle falling upon him! He sat up rubbing his eyes, looking around his room in bewilderment. There was no hole in the ceiling where he had come through and he found Eva in bed sleeping soundly, and worst of all the bicycle was gone.

The sun was peeping in the window and as he looked there was no sign of snow on the roof outside his window. He lay back on his pillow and hoped that he really would get the bicycle he had dreamed of, when Christmas came.

Mrs. A. Purdy, of Redford, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. Benwick Bell, of Knox street, this week.

The choir of the Methodist Episcopal church had a chop suey supper in the parlors of the church Thursday evening of last week. After the supper, a social time was enjoyed.

On Thursday, the Frank Wendland Post No. 253 of the American Legion is presenting "The Man Without a Country." The usual scale of prices will prevail with a matinee both days at 3:15 for school children. Owing to the extreme length of this remarkable production, Vaudeville will be omitted these two days only. In its place the members of the American Legion have arranged for an augmented orchestra of 12 musicians who will render the proper musical setting for the picture.

For Saturday only, Nov. 24th, "Only A Shop Girl" and "A Great Vaudeville Act" will be given. "Only A Shop Girl" is a film version of the Chas. Blaney great stage success and abounds in thrills and romance.

Pola Negri in "The Cheat" is being announced as one of the many coming attractions.

Little Folk's Column

A Month Before Christmas.

Eva and her brother, Boy, had talked to each other for quite a long time. Mother had tucked them in bed and put out the light, telling of the things they would like Santa Claus to put in their stockings on Christmas eve. Eva was six years old and Boy had just had his eighth birthday. Eva wanted a lovely doll with long curls down its back and moving joints, while Boy wished for a bicycle more than anything, for as he said to Eva, "If I could only have one I could go for miles and miles out in the country and ride to school every day."
