BALDWIN BEACON

A Weekly Journal Edited by the Students of Baldwin High School.

BALDWIN BRIEFS

"The only person in school with any spirit" went to sleep on a lady's shoulder on the way home. Tut! tut! Tut!

Not satisfied with cheating a one-armed man, Jeff Bell has to rob a poor defenseless Greek out of a pocketful of crackers.

Bray, Kelly and Hunt made themselves at home on the library table at Port Huron Y.M.C.A. They slept peacefully for two hours.

Arnold Grooms made the team miss the 5:30 car while he made up his mind whether or not to elope. Aha, Kathleen!

Edwin Weaver confined his reading material to Ben Hur and Ovid this trip.

Port Huron papers before the game said "Home Team Doped to Win." They must have had too much sleep.

Everybody is breathing easier now that exams are over. Read 'em and weep.

D'ja see Richard Haack step up front and sell his tickets? No back seats for you, Dick!

Consolidated trouble makers: Weaver, Symons, Shave, Mann and Whalen. Oh, boys, will you never grow up?

SIDELIGHTS ON PORT HURON TRIP
If that's what we do in a town for bootleggers, at will we do to a burg noted for bootleg? Look out Windsor!

Take it all in. We were royally treated in Port Huron. We lunched at a cafeteria where training table sets could be had, but took dinner at the Chamber of Commerce. It was as popular as a rich client in a law office. It's too bad fine rooters like those at Port Huron haven't a team to provoke a yell.

None can now doubt the appropriateness of George Rollins' pet moniker. It was with great difficulty Sparkplug was taken past the Mt. Clemens race track. The denial of his morning canter caused him to remark, "I'm going home where I'm appreciated."

Sells made the longest run of the day though it scored no points. He did five blocks in very creditable style, in order to catch the Port Huron limited.

Football gets all the attention from the spectators; but the card games seem of primary interest to the participants.

If the boys had played like they did against Highland Park and Ypsi the score would have been much larger.

Jeff Bell mused up one kick off but got away with it. Atta boy, Jeff!

For the first time this year B. H. S. used an aerial attack successfully. We scored a touchdown by it but we can't claim all the credit—Port Huron threw it.

Punk Symons didn't get enough football between whistles. While waiting for the car home he tackled an ice cream tub. That shows all tubs look alike to Punk. Keep thin, Florence.

Where should a football player's greatest strength be, above or below the collar? Guess again. Port Huron's was below.

Concerning the general honesty of figures one finds it difficult to maintain his faith in the study of arithmetic. Port Huron is a dignified blackened city of 34,000 souls, excluding bookagents and bootleggers. Our village is now boasting about 5,000 persons of varying importance.

Therefore Port Huron was supposed to be seven times as good.

Capt. Jenny Bray is a versatile athlete. He insists on pugilism to correct any erring grid opponent.

If we debate Port Huron we're sunk. They even practice during a football game. Referee Fry didn't appreciate their oratory—5 yards for stalling.

After a long run, Ernie remarks, "Gee, it's great to be crazy."

It is to be commended that we have no stars whose brilliancy dazzles the rest of the team. A team is so much better off without the solar system.

Referee Fry certainly believes in clean play. He's old Dutch Cleanser personified. He was as liberal with penalties as a cross teacher is with mean looks.

It has been suggested that the school buy Ernie Shave a bicycle. He insists on taking such long tours while engaged in a family quarrel with a football.

THE SOPHOMORE PARTY
Friday evening, Nov. 9, at 7:30 o'clock a large number of enthusiastic Sophomores assembled on the esplanade, ready for a hilarious time. As soon as the means of transportation arrived, we all journeyed to Hupp's farm. In a spacious barn we stored the cats, and then we danced and played games. The left afforded an excellent place of entertainment. It was not long before cries of "let's eat!" arose and so a large fire was built. Then weenies and buns were eaten by the dozens.

Following in rapid succession came apples, cookies, pickles, marshmallows. It is a fact that several gallons of cider were consumed by some ferocious (?) males. After more dancing, games and various other amusements, we departed homeward, well satisfied with our first party.

STUDY

By Chester D. Kelly
Needless to say, most of us were scared green by the mere thought of the ten weeks' exams. We thought "Oh, well, I don't know anything and I can't pass anyway, so what's the use of trying?" Is that the right way to do it? It's the same as a football team thinking that another team is too good for it, and giving up in despair before the game is played.

If you think you can't pass and you keep saying you can't, there isn't a teacher in school who can help you one particle. But if you get down to brass tacks, and admit that you don't know more than the next fellow, but determine that by the help of everything that's available you will learn and learn and learn—there isn't a teacher in school who won't be right behind you to help you pass the next obstacle. If you prove that you have the stuff in you to learn all that your teachers can teach you, it's going to help you more than you can imagine when the marks are averaged up. And when the time for exams comes rolling around, as it's bound to do, you can enter the "morgue" with the know-edge that you have spent ten weeks getting ready for this exam, and the conviction that what you can't write about history or geometry or physics isn't worth writing.

Let's all get down to work, this next ten weeks! Say we show our teachers that we mean business! They will feel much more like giving A's and B's to the students who show the old fight. If you shrink geometry because it's hard, you are going to shrink business and your life work for the same reason. Nothing is worth while that's easy to get, folks. If anybody could pick up a geometry book and demonstrate a theory without any study at all, scientists would have discarded geometry long ago as an unnecessary playing.

If we want to get out of B. H. S. and carry on in life, we've got to shake off the shackles of indifference to knowledge. We've got to buy and show the folks at home that studying is a necessary evil that we will willingly endure. Come on, gang—ten weeks gone, and still a whole raft of D's and F's are floating around among us! Take a book home for a change and see if you can't pry it open with something. A little study won't hurt you! Let's go!!!

B. H. S. VICTORIOUS OVER PORT HURON

We were willing to let them. In the fourth quarter the local team again started the fireworks. When ten yards on the proper side of midfield, the right side of Birmingham's line temporarily obliterated the opposite view of the enemy. Punk Symons dodged, side-stepped and sprinted through 40 yards of hostile territory to the final touchdown. Vliet scored the additional mark on a drop kick.

The game was well played, taken all in all. None of Birmingham's players were quite themselves—the long trolley ride made them tired before they started. Shave's punts, while so long, were well placed, thus giving advantage of full distance and avoiding a long run back. Bell kicked off for Birmingham and gained the most ground.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the spirit and nerve shown by Rollins with a broken left shoulder, as a mascot he stepped out and showed the rest of the line how it is done.
