

The Child in The Home

By
VERA M. AMOS, R.N.

Mothers! This is your day—never more so than now. Never so much before in the history of time has your influence carried more weight than at the present moment. You mean more to your children in the making of it through your children than any other influence which can be brought to bear. Does not such an incentive urge you to be one of the pillars, holding your country at the highest viewpoint to all the world?

Did you hear the speech of Mr. Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, one night he broadcasted over the radio? He was speaking of Child Welfare and said that the state have the interest of all children at heart, but could only do what such community would do. I will go farther than Mr. Hoover and say, the community can only do what each Mother will do in her own home in the training of her children. This is the greatest influence which the welfare of our coming generation, and can only be felt by the influence they receive in the home.

I was visiting in a home a few weeks ago, where besides Mother and Father there were four boys, ages from six to sixteen years. To my astonishment, the boys took the initiative in leading the conversation. This was entirely on automobiles. This in itself was of no great harm, other than the boys' interest in the subject, and it should quite plainly the influence in the home. In this instance, the Father nor Mother were strong enough in individuality to cope with the influence their boys brought from the outside world, and naturally after awhile began to live outside the lives of their children.

This, I say, I state it is so necessary to start the training of the children right from the earliest stages. No doubt you will argue and say, "Why should not the boys talk of autos. There is no harm in such a subject."

Very true, I grant you. But why should both the parents have to follow the lead of their children, which I find so often the case? Why should not the Father and Mother be the leaders and turn the trend of the children's interests into something which will not only be a profit to them but to all whom they come in contact with?

This is what I would say to all Mothers. This your chance, this is your day. Put your shoulders to the wheel and work with all the power God has endowed you to combat this great influence which is enveloping both your boy and your girl in a whirl of society today. For you are the only one to do this, as your influence must be the right one for you have not the great honor of being "A Mother." This sacred honor put upon you, sets you apart to be the hand maiden of your Heavenly Father and so he expects you to be accountable for the best that is within you by training your little ones in the way they should go.

This is my farewell talk to you for the present, as I am taking up other work which necessitates more of my time, but I hope to come again to you in the future if you will be good enough to give me your interest once more.

BIRMINGHAM and Bloomfield Hills are to be congratulated on the beautiful-homes existing and being built in their midst.

The charm of a beautiful home may be enhanced much by an artistic arrangement of planting. The planting should reflect the individuality of the home. In order to obtain the bushy effect desired the plants must have ample root systems and be of a well developed size.

We grow a large assortment of plan material for home grounds. Home owners are invited to drive out and look through our grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Thomas, of Virginia Park, Detroit, have moved to Birmingham and are now living at 514 Madison Ave.

Wednesday afternoon and evening of this week Mrs. Mary J. Morris was surprised by a number of her Detroit friends in celebration of her eighty-second birthday. Mrs. Morris has watched the growth of Detroit from its early days and was a resident of that city until four years ago, at which time she came to make her home with her son, Delbert C. Morris, of Townsend street. Among those present were her sister, Mrs. Matilda C. Frank, her niece, Mrs. Lydia Bigelow, Mrs. Frank J. Hooper, Mrs. Sarah Segar and Miss Jennie Houk, all of Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Groves attended the Michigan-Ohio State football game last Saturday. They were accompanied by Mr. John H. Curtin, of Flint, and Robert C. Parks, of Pittsburg.
