Besides the nervous children of a bright type, we have cases just exactly opposite...

Do not start in either case by over-cramming mentally before the infant has passed into childhood...

Let your babies be carefully nursed in the fresh air. And above all, do not allow any excitement to enter their lives when their minds are too weak to control it...

Teach them to go quietly to sleep when made comfortable in their beds. Very often we will find with nervous children that they awake at night in a state of terror...

When a Mother finds out of her children is becoming nervous, she should be careful to keep the child clean in a dark room...

One very bad habit is to permit anyone to toss the baby in the air. It is a habit which is almost always with fear and delight...

I will tell you here of one instance where an infant of only nine months was brought into one of the wards—such a lovely baby, properly nursed...

and if the environment of the Home is not all it should be for the benefit of the children, how can we blame them when they take the wrong course?

Through there are so many causes which could lead to nervousness in a child, does this not make every child more anxious to be taught the influence which would play havoc with the nervous system?

Let us then, as mothers, be careful to teach, control, and to turn into the right channels. This very impressionable little mind is developing...
