How often have you sat at your sewing or at some other kind of work in the house, listening at the same time to your children's chatter, or watching them at their play, when to your horror you become conscious of the untruths they are telling each other.

You will ask yourself, "surely I have not so far neglected my duty to them that they do not know right from wrong, or truth from a lie?"

Each Mother will feel as she listens, that it is necessary to punish the child right away, but you must not. You think that strange logic, no doubt, but let me tell you, in many cases these stories are the work of an over-ly imagination, and the statements that you hear from the children are not really told with the idea of deceiving. Very often you will find these tales they tell are no larger than the toys the child plays with to know the child, but very often have a practical bearing on something they have seen or heard. When we hear them express themselves in a manner contrary to what we consider fitting, we perhaps punish them according to the view we take on their words, when the real trouble is this; we are unable to comprehend the child's way of looking at things, and if Mother would take the trouble to probe the matter, she would find the statement was based on erroneous belief. Therefore, it is most important that we analyze the actions and the help of the children, so we can have a correct knowledge of their motives. Mother is the proper one to do this because she hears them, and their influence on the child is the one who spends most of her time looking after the child, and it is she who must come to them all the way through life. Because of this valuable time spent with them, she is making their own start in life, this which must come to them all the way through life, and to give to them the right view of many things for their benefit is given.

STYLES DRAW INSPIRATION FROM THE FAR EAST

Each in the group is designed from some Chinese headpiece. The model at the top is of black velvet, trimmed with pearls, beads and large jewels in brilliant colors. Its lines and ornament are inspired by a ceremonial crown. The left is another development from a similar source. This is of striped velvet, with a deep fringe of the same material, surmounted by black chantilly lace. The two hats at the right had their inspiration in the conventional headdress of Buddha; the upper is of Canton blue braid over a close-fitting turban shape with a hanging fringe of international importance so far as fashions are concerned, since all designers look to it for inspiration.

There's Only One Method. When a woman is going to buy a hat and is determined to get it, it is only fair to look to the hat that wears a woman as well as looks like a hat, and no man can control her mind until she has talked to the lid—from "Black Oxen" by Gertrude Atherton.

Weddings

Stewart-Asphole Married at the Methodist parsonage, Saturday, September 16, Mrs. Agnes Stewart, of East Wadsworth, and George A. Asphole, of Fort Huron, Rev. Julian West officiating.

Henshel-Thompson Only members of immediate families and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony which united Miss Henshel Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Emma Henkel, of Alton Park Manor, Detroit, and Mr. Walter Thompson, of Bloomfield Hills, Wednesday evening, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Louis Warner, on Seminole avenue, Detroit.

A nuptial platform, at one end of which the bride and groom were seated, was artistically decorated with gaily and autumn flowers, the flowers being scattered in profusion throughout the house. Kneeling on hassocks, the bride couple spoke their vows. Dean William Rogers, of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, officiating.

Miss Helen was given away by her brother, Edward Henkel, of Detroit, who was in a velvet dress of a beautiful shade of yellow and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. There were 10 attendants.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served and a reception was held for about fifty guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left Wednesday night for a trip to the East. They will be home at 1125 North Subdivision, Bloomfield Hills, after October 15.
