Pretty things that are made at Home

Even in such responsible and frivolous things as bodice caps and dance hats, fashion lives up to its reputation for fickleness. Certain styles in them come to the fore like a flock of gay butterflies, flourish tremendously for a brief time, and are superseded by some newer whim that—but not entirely neglected for there are always all kinds of caps in the display.

Black chantly lace and narrow satin ribbon accomplish a pert and most becoming little affair that merely suggests a cap but is highly decorative. A coronet is formed of the lace by sewing a gathered length of it to a band of ribbon which extends about the head and ties at the back or on the side.

Gold or silver lace with malines or chiffon for the soft crown, make the pretty dance cap, requiring two pieces to support the brim. Hats of this kind are worn by bridesmaids and require only a long slash of narrow ribbon, and a little cluster of flowers for trimming.

Dear "Too Fat": I have all the sympathy in the world for you, my dear woman, but I can see the lighter from your husband's viewpoint as well.

When he decided to marry he fell in love with the ideal woman, a small girl and not a fat girl. He will send me a self-addressed stamped envelope, I will send you the name of the book for $1.00 if you wish to buy it.

Let me know how you are getting along. We will be wondering if you had that husband enough to remain in love with a little sacrifice on your part. I am sure that all you need is to make yourself attractive that he will fall in love again. Best of fortune to you.

Little Folk's Column

My Dear Little People: I have received so many letters in the past few days that I am unable to answer them all. I am sorry that I cannot do so, but I have no time to do so.

Dear Bonnie: I am hoping that I shall be the first to write you asking you to start a young folks column. I would like you to see them. The only one I am giving you to read will be all for you. I would like to see them.

Dear Little Mary Louise: I received and before I talk or tell Fairy Stories to the other children of my course are for you to write me to tell you how glad I am you wrote me, but I am sorry about your poor back. I am sorry to hear that little crossness, which will come in spite of mother's great love.

"ROBIN'S FORCE"
Living in a far away country there was a boy named Robin. His father and a blacksmith's forge, and every day Robin made a huge fire in the forge to make iron hot and beat it into shapes.

Near the forge in a large castle there lived a King. He was certainly a Fair King and everything he commanded obeyed him. Birds, the wind, and the water all did as he bid. The King had a castle in which he lived. He was very kind and he would like to be King and live in a castle.

One day after the King had passed by Robin wished his wish aloud, and to his great astonishment a voice answered him, saying "Your wish shall be granted, Robin. From now on until you break the spell you shall be King."
