160 Guests Enjoy Bridge, Mah Jongg Tea At "Valhalla"

First Of Affairs For Local Community House A Great Success

More than 160 guests attended the benefit bridge and mah jongg tea at "Valhalla," the beautiful home of the T. R. Donovans in Bloomfield Hills, on Tuesday afternoon. This affair, the first of several which have been planned to help defray expenses in the remodeling of and additions to the community house now under way, netted the building fund between $160 and $180. The other members of the community house board, Mrs. Arthur Hartwell, Mrs. G. T. Hendrie, Mrs. John Marlotte, Mrs. W. Raymond, Mrs. Raymond Reilly and Mrs. Charles Shain, wish to express their sincerest appreciation to Mrs. Donovan for her generosity in lending her home and donating tea and prizes for the fifty tables.

The second event, to help make up the necessary balance, will be a benefit play by the Village Players early in the fall. This will be given in the community house which is expected to open on or about August 20.

Everyone has shown a personal interest in the changes in the house. Packard & Charlton Co., contractors who are doing the work, have donated their services to the community board.

Members of the advisory board of the house, which was created in the spring, were announced this week. They are, Thomas H. Cobb, Clarence Vliet, E. G. Potter, E. G. Wasey and Charles Bingham.

At the regular meeting of the community house board held Monday, Mrs. Raymond Reilly was elected to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Mrs. Peter D. Hilty.

Booths Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. James Booth entertained at a family dinner on Tuesday evening at their home, Tower Cottage in Cranbrook. Covers were laid for twelve.

Benefit Successful.

Extremely lovely and successful was the benefit mah jongg tea on Tuesday after- noon at the home of Mrs. T. R. Donovan at "Valhalla" in the Hills for about one hundred and sixty guests. The tea was the first of a series of benefit affairs designed to raise fnuds for the remodeling of the community house here.

91 Years Young—She Makes Her Own Dresses In Style

Mrs. Mary P. Colby Tells Guest That Youth Still Moves Her Life

By Phyllis E. Myhrs.

Sitting quaintly in an old fashioned rocker, her head resting on a rose flowered tidy, Mrs. Mary P. Colby rocked back and forth and talked with her guest, Wednesday afternoon. Now and again she would interrupt the trend of conversation by looking over at the parrot and answering its queries.

"That bird," explained her daughter, Mrs. James Burnett, "is grandmuh's pet. It is as playful as a kitten with gran-muh, and an inseparable friend, but it absolutely ignores anyone else."

"I heard that you made yourself a dress on your ninety-first birthday," said the guest admiringly, "and I would like to see it."

Gran'ma blushed and smiled happily as she went into her bed room, returning with a voile dress in orange and blue and black and trimmed with a touch, of lace at the neck and bits of ribbon on the sickie and cuffs. It was made in the latest style, long waisted and designed to be worn with a leather belt. All the outside seams were hand sewn. It was nothing if not smart. To wear with the dress Mrs. Colby had made a black satin slip, which was, as she explained, "almost as hard to make as the dress."

At her guest's praise, gran'ma explained that she had always done her own sewing. "Both of my husbands were farmers, and I had to do things pretty much for myself," she explained. "I feel as young and able as I did when I came, and I see no reason why my ninety-one years should make any difference. I always take care of my own bedroom and iron all my own clothes."

Back in an old fashioned house, on Bates street, away from the dust and noise of passing automobiles, Mrs. Colby has lived with her only daughter, Mrs. Burnett, since the death of her husband fourteen years ago. On the 18th of July she celebrated her ninety-first birthday anniversary and incidentally completed a new dress.

"Is it your Sunday best," inquired the guest, getting just a little afraid that the older woman would regard her as a question box.

Gran'ma gave her visitor a friendly smile and replied, "Well, no, although I do wear it when I call on my grandson, Sidney Colby, out West Maple road. But I have made others just as nice; I guess I prefer this one for the folded fabric creation (the white), because it's the newest."

A dash of rain outdoors and the guest decided she would have to go. She took a last look at the dress and then let her eyes rest on gran'ma. How lovely she looked, rocking back and forth in her rocker (the same rocker she had owned for sixty-six years), her white waist with lace insertion, and prim white apron almost covering a beautiful white skirt enhancing her fragile loveliness. She presented a picture of a real grandmother—the sort one dreams about in this day, when flapper dames who compete with daughter and granddaughter.

After making her acknowledgments, the guest ran down to her car, pursued as she went by Polly's cries of "Good bye, pet."
