SEEKS SISTER, FORMER RESIDENT OF VILLAGE

Does any reader of The Eccentric know the whereabouts of Ed Figg, or any of his relatives? The Eccentric has been asked to locate Florence Fish, sister of E. A. Rigg, of 7875 Hadson Street, Detroit.

According to Riggs, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Fish, who formerly kept a hotel in Birmingham, adopted his sister about twenty-six years ago, when she was about six years old. Riggs is desirous of finding his sister, whom he believes moved away from Birmingham with the Fish family to Chicago, Ill., or some other mid-west state. Readers of The Eccentric who may shed any light on this will find Mr. Riggs grateful if they will communicate with him in Detroit.

COMMUNITY HOUSE TO HOLD PUBLIC CHRISTMAS FETE

Christmas will be celebrated this year at the community house with a Christmas tree, decorated and lighted in festival style, on the plot of ground in front of the house where the bulletin board stands. Open house will be kept in the community house durtng Christmas evening and hot chocolate and cakes will be on hand for the carollers and villagers who may drop in. There will also be Christmas music and decorations in the house to make it attractive for any who may wish to visit on their way to and from Christmas celebrations.

Christmas trees have been put up on several previous years on the ground in front of the village office. This year, however, it is planned to make more of a community affair of it than was possible before.

MISS E. PENNY DIRECTING "THE CHRISTMAS GUEST"

"The Christmas Guest," a play in one act by Constance D'Arcy Mackay, is to be given by Miss Marion Bingham's Blue Bird group at the community house on Friday, December 19, at 8:30 in the evening. Miss Elizabeth Penny is directing the play, which is in the manner of a miracle play, with its setting in a sixteenth century castle. Mrs. Raymond W. Reilly, as a strolling troubadour, will sing Christmas ballads.

The caste includes Alice Smith, Catherine Crawford, Edith Rainey, Mary Clare Starr, Florabelle Erwin, Shirley Brown and Jean Gilbert.
