For Anti-Freeze Solution WE RECOMMEND Glycerine For Best Results

Alcohol has for several years been the commonly accepted anti-freeze solution, but it is not ideal because its boiling point is only 173 degrees, while that of water is 212 degrees.

ONE FILLING LASTS ALL WINTER We, therefore, recommend that glycerine be used. The original expense is greater but it has a boiling point of 554 degrees.

Glycerine—30% freezes at 12 deg. F. below zero 40% freezes at 2 deg. F. below zero 45% freezes at 8 deg. F. below zero

We suggest, and strongly recommend, the use of a suitable Winter-front or cover on the radiator, and a louvre covers for the openings in the side of the hood.

We have Glycerine on hand and can take care of your needs promptly. We also recommend the installation of a Winter-front, a stock of which we keep on hand for various cars.
