SOCIETY

Thanksgiving Day Will Bring Society Together In Groups

New England's old forms and customs are having a revival in the village and Hills this Thanksgiving season in the family groups that are gathering to the home hearth for the holiday. The Thanksgiving atmosphere has penetrated these little family circles and the guests at Thanksgiving dinner have been added to by long invitation lists of friends to gather about the festive board.

All society is planning to entertain elaborately at home or by accepting invitations to join in other family groups and little has been done in a social way during the first part of the week. The last University of Michigan football game last Saturday marked the closing of the foot ball season and again leaves the week-ends available for social functions.

Football has had a greater following this season than any previous year and, with the large numbers of society folks leaving on Fridays for games far and near, the week-ends in the village and hills have been comparatively quiet. The coming week-end has had little planned either, as Thanksgiving house parties will be dispersing during the last days of the week and large numbers of the Village folk expect to be out of town for the holiday.

Among the family dinners now scheduled for Thanksgiving Day is one arranged by Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Donovan of "Valhalla," Bloomfield Hills. The dinner has come to be, in the past years, a notable affair and will gather 'round their table this year are Attorney Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Donovan and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Neff and their two sons, Irwin, Edward and Mortimer, who will return from day night after a visit with Mrs. Neff's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Arthur of the day. Mrs. Mortimer Bigelow of California and her daughter, Miss Catherine Bigelow, are house guests of the Donovans during the hunting season. Also Miss Theresa Donovan, who will arrive today from Chicago to be with the family and spend some time with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Donovan and Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Donovan.

Lakewood, Ohio, Guest

Among the interesting house-guests in the village the last week-end was Mrs. Carleton Shinock who was here from Lakewood, Ohio, spending several days with Mrs. B. M. Zimmerman on Vinewood avenue. Monday evening Mrs. Zimmerman entertained at two tables of bridge for the pleasure of Mrs. Shinock who departed on Tuesday. Her guests at bridge included Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Martin of Detroit, Miss Cornelia Mack and John Muirhead.

Third Married Folks Dance Held Tuesday

One of the few very gay, social affairs of the week was a dance for the married set Tuesday evening when the third in the series of four Married Peoples Dances occurred in the Odd Fellows Temple. The usual assemblage gathered for the dance which proved to be the best attended dance and the most representative one of this season's series. The dances are sponsored by the University of Michigan League as a source of funds for their quota to the Woman's building in Ann Arbor.

Before the dance, Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Simpson of Madison avenue, had fourteen of the married crowd to dinner honoring their house-guest, Miss Dorothy Finney, who is spending several weeks here, and Mrs. L. T. Hurst who has arrived to spend the winter with Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Dwelley on East Maple avenue.

Besides the honor guests, the Simpsons had invited Mr. and Mrs. Royal P. Bills of Detroit and Robert Lipton of Detroit, Dr. and Mrs. George P. Raynale, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Dwelley, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Glover, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wasey and E. G. Wasey.

Miss Mary Martin Writes From China

Miss Mary Martin, remembered by many Birmingham people for her work as director of the community house last year, is now serving in China for the winter as executive Secretary of the Peking Institute of Fine Arts. In her letters she writes much that will interest untravelled Americans who have to know the East at second hand.

Describing the ancient city of Peking where she is now located, Miss Martin writes, "I can't begin to tell about the fascination of Peking. It would be like trying to describe Paris. In spite of the Legation quarters and the modern Pekin Hotel, Peking is still thoroughly Chinese. You feel as though you had returned to the middle ages.

"It is a city within cities. The Forbidden City, where the emperor lived until the Revolution which was only in 1911, is in the center of the Imperial City where the imperial retainers lived. Each city is surrounded by a wall. Outside of the Imperial City is the Tartan City surrounded by the outer wall of Peking. This wall was outlined by Kublai Khan and rebuilt by the Mings. Beyond this city is what they call the Chinese city. After the Manchus conquered Peking they drove the Chinese into the city. The streets are narrow, muddy little roadways and the only way of getting about is by richsha.

"There is a large colony of foreigners owing to the Legation and the schools and universities, and many of the foreigners live in Tartan houses. We have our offices in the Communist's House in the former Austrian Legation. Besides the offices we have our dormitories, dining hall, lessons, dancing and dramatics and exhibitions, talks and concerts. So you see we are very busy. I have a Chinese clerk, a funny little man who wears a long black coat and has a pigtail. I speak and read fairly well and am taking Mandarin lessons. I have also taken up painting. They say I'm a little Theatre. I'm very glad I know something about it. I'm going to put on a play with a Chinese cast for the Rug who are Chinese women. I'm not sure how it will turn out but it's going to be interesting for me. They all find such differences in the Chinese and Americans."

The Woman's Literary Club will present Miss Maude Baker Morris at their meeting next Tuesday afternoon in the community house. Miss Morris has had a stage career for many years and has played with John Mason, Blanche Bates, and with William Hodge in "The Road To Happiness," a successful play that was put on about four years ago, and in company with Henrietta Crosman. Her success on the stage and in dramatic readings insures an interesting afternoon's entertainment for the club members next Tuesday. Mrs. Phillip B. Price has arranged the program for the meeting.

Plan Unique Setting For New Year Dance

The New Year's Eve dance, sponsored by the American Legion to help the American Legion Children's Billet at Otter Lake, is to be one of the gayest and most unique of the holiday entertainments, it is promised by members of the chapter. Everyone in town is invited by the local order to be present at the festivities.

"Plans have been developed to make it a real frontier party such as they had in the days of '49. The whole of the Odd Fellows Hall has been secured for the occasion, and it is to be transformed into an amusement resort typical of some frontier town in the days when there were no bans or village ordinances to regulate one's pastimes. Everyone attending the dance will take part in the gold rush, which promises to make an advance sale of every dance gets inside the doors," said Wylie Pearsall, one of the local Legion members on the committee.

Guests are to come in costume, but are not to masquerade. Competition in the matter of costumes will be keen among those who will be interested in the cash prizes, one for the best man's costume and one for the best woman's. There is also to be a prize for the couple who are judged the best dancers.

The Children's Billet at Otter Lake, which is to be assisted by proceeds of the dance, has been carried on during the past few years by the state department of the American Legion for the care of ex-soldiers' children, and some of the mothers. At present there are 67 children being taken care of there, while 200 have applied for admission who can not be taken care of for lack of accomodations.
