How Franklin Almost Became County Seat

Time was when the now quiet, happily dosing village of Franklin was a leader of villages in the county...

From all over the state, including the Upper Peninsula, the farmer came to Franklin with his corn to provide himself and family with the then household necessity, whisky...

An interesting story is told of the men at about that time. An accident, one day, of a quantity of cherries were placed in a barrel that was kept on the counter to supply the whisky needed in the barroom...

Along with other things, the cherries were thrown into the pig trough. A half hour later, J. Allen Bigelow, coming up the Franklin hill...
